43 Persons Victims of Akron Train Wreck

Freight and Gasoline Car Crash

Engineman Blamed for Failure to Put Gasoline Coach on Another Track

No Chance

Passengers in Inferno As 'Rigid' Rule Is Disregarded

(By The Associated Press)

Akron, O., Aug 1—Railroad investigators today blamed an engineman's failure to follow operating orders for the fiery death of 43 persons in 1940's second major train wreck.

They said failure to sidetrack a gasoline-electric coach caused it to crash head-on with a 73-car freight train near here last night.

The steel coach instantly became a virtual furnace. Three railroad workers leaped to safety. All the others aboard burned to death. Five children were among the victims.

The coach's single engineman, Thomas L. Murtough, 49, was blamed by L. M. Wolcott, Cleveland trainmaster for the Pennsylvania railroad, on whose single-track Hudso-Akron line the crash occurred. Murtough, seriously injured, was unable to tell his story.

Wolcott, watching crews clear away the wreckage, declared:

"The crew of the 'Doodlebug' (the gasoline coach) and the crews of the freight train had orders to meet at Silver Lake, one mile north of the scene, and wait for the freight to pass. Murtough should have taken his train onto the siding there. For some reason he did not go onto the siding."

J. F. Allenspaugh, Akron yard master, said his investigation also showed the "Doodlebug's" crew was at fault.

Rule Disregarded

After a preliminary investigation, E. W. Smith, vice-president of the railroad, expressed a similar view and said the coach's crew also disregarded a "rigid" rule in failing to obtain permission from the block operator at Hudson before continuing on the main track.

In a statement at Pittsburgh he added:

"With Engineman Murtough and Conductor (Harry) Shafer of the motor car badly injured in Akron Hospitals, and with Baggagemaster (Charles) Bilderback dead, it is impossible to determine now why these orders were disobeyed."

Use Dynamite

Walls of Camden Factory to Be Blown Down to Aid in Hunt for Missing

Camden, N. J., Aug. 1 (AP).—Firemen turned to dynamite today to blast the fire-scarred walls of a paint factory and speed the search for seven persons missing in the $2,000,000 blaze that destroyed a four-block area of midtown Camden.

Two were known dead from the flames which followed a series of explosions in the five-story R. M. Hollingshead Company plant.

Twenty-one persons were in hospitals, four in serious condition, and 67 houses were destroyed, leaving 124 families homeless.

Mrs. Mary W. Kobus, municipal safety commissioner, warned residents of Camden and adjoining Philadelphia that "there will be a terrific blast" (between 8 and 9 a. m., E. S. T.) when the factory walls are dynamited. But she added:

"There will be nothing to be afraid of, as the dynamite will not be drilled into the building but will be planted in the ground. The walls will topple, not explode."

Streams of water played on the smoking ruins all night as asbestosclad firemen poked among the twisted steel girders and piles of brick in a search for the victims. Meanwhile, authorities outlined an inquiry that will review the "possibility" of sabotage.

Officials of the company, which had been working on a government paint order declared, however, they believed the explosions and fire were accidental.

Nazis Spread War From Air Along English Coastline

German Military Observers Stress Point of Making British Ports Useless for Supplies

(By The Associated Press)

Nazi bombers, favored by improving weather, spread the war of aerial attrition up and down the English coast today, hammering away with high explosives at the ports which link a world empire.

The British ministry of more security, however, minimized the damage inflicted by the raiders.

The German high command gave point to a statement of Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, that Britain would be brought low by bombing and blockade by announcing "night raids * * * against ships and facilities in southern English ports, as well as against searchlight positions."

Last night, the high command said, there were air fights near Dover—the vital channel port which Nazi bombers raided Monday. West of the Scilly Islands, about 25 miles off Lands End, England, armed merchantships were bombarded, the communique said.

Like Gayda, military observers in Germany emphasized the point of making English ports useless for receiving war supplies.

The Nazis claimed to have shot down five British planes and two barrage balloons in the battle near Dover, as well as three British planes entering Norwegian, Dutch and Danish territory. They admitted two of their own were missing. In England it was believed three German planes were brought down.

The high command also acknowledged that British planes had raided Germany, but declared their bombs had been dropped in Hanover, far from any military objective.

English Harbors Attacked

At the same time, sources close to the German high command gave point to a statement of Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, that Britain would be brought low by bombing and blockade by declaring that Germany had again attacked the vital channel port of Dover yesterday—the second time in three days. Other English harbors were also attacked, these sources said.

Military observers in Germany also emphasized the point of making the ports useless.

Britain's own counter strategy of extending her blockade from the Arctic to North Africa brought word from Tokyo today, through Domei, Japanese news agency, that the Japanese ambassador at London would protest, declaring Japan's trade with Spain, Portugal and other neutrals would suffer.

And while western Europe waited for a possible outbreak of blitzkrieg methods against Britain—for many were skeptical of Gayda's statement and apparent German agreement with the notion—there was excitement and gayety in Russia.

The Supreme Soviet, Russia's parliament, convened to welcome formally the states of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania into the union. All three voted the union last month.

Say Battle Is On

Germans intimated that invasion is not in the immediate picture—but said the battle of Britain already is on.

That battle went into its new phase last Monday when dive bombers concentrated in a harbor-wrecking attack on Dover, German military observers declared. Now, they said, the stukas can smash the rest of England's harbor and shipping facilities port by port.

The British, who have conceded some damage to southeastern ports, broadened their own blockade effective at midnight last night from the Arctic to Africa.

In the South Atlantic east of Brazil British warships were believed to have taken up the chase of a German raider which fought to a draw with the British merchant cruiser Alcantara.

At least one direct hit killed two and wounded seven aboard the 22,000-ton Alcantara and so cut the merchant cruiser's speed that she had to give up the chase and limp to Rio De Janeiro, 660 miles east of the Brazilian island of Trinidad, where the fight took place. The raider with disappearing guns fled behind a smoke screen.

Elsewhere in the war at sea, Britain announced the sinking of the 1,375-ton Delight, 29th British

Rains and Winds Smash Summer's Worst Heat Wave

(By The Associated Press)

Rains followed by cooling winds today smashed the summer's worst heat wave.

Some of the parched areas continued warm but generally relief reached most of the territory that had sweltered under blazing sun and high humidity for two weeks.

The death toll stood at 1,002, of which 482 were caused by heat prostration and 520 by drowning. Lightning killed scores of others.

Rain arrived late yesterday in Washington, D. C., to break the worst heat wave there since 1930. Moderate temperatures were forecast for today and tomorrow. The 13-day siege in Maryland collapsed under showers and cooling breezes.

In New York state, the mercury fell to 57 in Albany and 62 in Buffalo last night and today began with moderate temperatures which were expected to continue through tomorrow.

Pennsylvania temperatures were in the middle 80's today with cool weather in prospect tomorrow. Forecasters said heat might return over the week-end. In Michigan, the mercury fell to 55 this morning and 85 was the highest predicted for today.

Despite widespread thunderstorms, temperatures containued high in Nebraska. Grand Island had 102 yesterday and Hastings suffered serious damage from a windstorm. Morning temperatures in that state were about par with yesterday's.

Mayor Bernard Dickmann of St. Louis proclaimed "shirt sleeve days" when the mercury hit 97 yesterday. That made it officially okay for men to appear coatless in public.

Temperatures in Chicago remained in the comfortable 70's overnight. Similar conditions were forecast for today with possibly a rise to 90 tomorrow.

Merchants Making Plans for Annual Picnic August 15

Event Scheduled Will Be Held at Williams Lake for Employers and Their Clerks

A program of events is being scheduled for the big annual Merchants-Employe picnic to be held again this year at Williams Lake on Thursday, August 15, when the business people of Kingston and their clerks will forget business for a half day and make merry at the Rosendale resort.

Ben Fein, chairman of the committee on arrangements, announced at the monthly meeting of the Uptown Business Men's Association this morning that one of the features of the day will be the ball game between the "Chain Stores" and the "Independent Merchants." Following this there will be a varied sports program with prizes for the various athletic contests and swimming of course will be in order. In the evening after dinner has been served there will be dancing.

Stores to Close

Stores will close at 12:30 o'clock in order to give the employes a full afternoon of pleasure. Arrangements have also been made for a large bus to convey those who do not have their own transportation.

This year supper will be served at 6 o'clock. All guests will be seated and service will be at the table instead of buffet style as in the past. The management of Williams Lake will have a force of waiters sufficient to serve the meal expeditiously.

Members discussed the parking ground situation and a plan will probably be placed in effect to have the park marked off in parking lines so as to eliminate some of the lost space which now cuts down the number of cars. All cars will be required to park within the lines.

James H. Betts was designated as the association representative to the Broadway grade crossing elimination hearing to be held at Albany.

To Raise Signs

A proposition to have the parking signs in the business area placed on higher standards so that they may be more readily seen by strangers was discussed. One merchant stated that recently out of town people complained that they had not seen the hour limit parking signs when they parked their cars and the association members stated their opinion that as a mat-

Artists to Appear at Benedictine Concert

GEORGES BARRERE

PIERRE HENROTTE

The concert given last year by Pierre Henrotte, former concert master of the Metropolitan Opera House, for the Benedictine Hospital was such a success musically, that music lovers in Kingston have asked to have it repeated. The coming concert is scheduled for Friday, September 13, at the Kingston High School Auditorium. The outstanding artists who will participate in this concert of chamber music will be Inez Carroll Richards, pianist; Georges Barrere, flautist; Pierre Henrotte, violinist; and Horace Britt, 'cellist, musicians known and admired by music lovers.

Check-Up in Fruit Area Today Shows Serious Storm Damage

Walker, McNutt Favored to Take Jim Farley's Place

Washington, Aug. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt and a five-member committee faced a narrowed field of choices today in selecting a new Democratic National Chairman to direct the party's campaign.

Frank C. Walker, New York business man and lawyer, and Paul V. McNutt of Indiana, Federal Security Administrator, were said by Democratic leaders to be most favored for the place being vacated August 17 by James A. Farley.

But it was admitted that another might be chosen. The situation was described last night as still unsettled following a lengthy luncheon conference between the President and Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, who had been strongly urged for the chairmanship.

Byrnes, Roosevelt floor manager at the Chicago convention, said after the conference that he would be "unable to accept" the campaign post if offered because he suffered from hay fever during the early autumn.

He added, however, that after October 1, when the malady lets up, he would volunteer to "aid in any and every way I can for the success of the ticket."

Leo T. Crowley of Wisconsin, chairman of the federal deposit insurance corporation, who also had been mentioned for the post, said he would "much prefer not to have to take it." Like Byrnes,

Clintondale Alone Places Loss at Least $25,000 With Damage Greater Than That of 1938

Damage by hail and wind in the fruit-growing region from New Paltz to Highland was described today by M. G. Hurd, one of the largest apple growers in the area as greater than that during the hurricane of two years ago.

A rough estimate of the damage in the Clintondale section alone, Mr. Hurd said amounts to at least $25,000 in the apple crops and considerable more damage has been reported in various other scattered sections on many farms caught in the path of what was described today as a "regular little twister."

Losses in many orchards of the region, Mr. Hurd said, was estimated at from 50 to 60 per cent but because of the freakish character of the storm the damage was more scattered than concentrated.

It was estimated this morning that at least 75 apple trees were uprooted in the vicinity of Clintondale and several shade trees were reported blown down there.

Othr Hailstorms

Damage by hail this season has been quite serious to many growers of the area since the storm of Tuesday was the fourth experienced there since spring.

Mr. Hurd estimated this morning that he has lost at least 1,500 bushels of MacIntosh apples as a result of the heavy wind and many other large sections of his crop

By-Pass Accident Tangles Traffic For Over 3 Hours

Two large tractor-trailers and a pleasure car tangled at the junction of the East Chester street by-pass and route 9-W last evening about 9:30 o'clock and traffic was tied up until about 1 o'clock this morning giving police officials a difficult job. It took several deputy sheriffs and State Police to keep traffic on the move.

Mrs. John L. Hughes of 80 Cedar street, an occupant of the pleasure car, was the only person apparently injured and she refused medical attention.

John L. Hughes, driving north on the by-pass, attempted to make a turn to his left just south of the traffic light at the triangle junction and cut across the highway ahead of a tractor-trailer of the Liberty Fast Freight Co., Inc., of 600 Market street, East Paterson, N. J., which was being operated southerly by Thomas Pisaturo of 48 Richards street, Passaic, N. J., who had started down the by-pass.

Pisaturo swung his vehicle loaded heavily with cans and bottles of vinegar, apple juice and prune juice to the left to avoid the Hughes car and had to cut back quickly to his right to avoid another tractor-trailer coming north on the by-pass. This vehicle was owned and operated by Ronald Whittaker of Shortsville, N. Y.

In attempting to cut back to avoid the second truck the Liberty Fast Freight vehicle began to sway and finally the trailer tore loose

Japanese Brand United States Ban On Gasoline as Economic Pressure

Tokyo, Aug. 1 (AP) — President Roosevelt's ban on the export of aviation gasoline to points outside the western hemisphere was interpreted by the admiralty spokesman today as a move against Japan, Germany and Italy which might lead to "repercussions."

The spokesman also inferentially warned foreign powers against interference in the current round-up of persons—apparently mostly Britons—suspected of espionage. He said this was entirely an internal affair, and in this connection he warned newspaper correspondents against "illegitimate activities."

The American aviation gasoline embargo, he said, was "an attempt to kill two birds with one stone," namely the Rome-Berlin axis and Japan.

"Under whatever pretext the order on aviation gasoline was issued," he said, "it undoubtedly is designed to exert economic pressure on Japan.

"If America continues on the same lines it is bound to cause repercussions."

(President Roosevelt signed the order yesterday in "the interest of national defense," a White House announcement said. Japan, although formerly a good customer for American aviation gasoline, has received practically none since a "moral embargo" was imposed by the U. S. last year for the bombings of Chinese civilians. During the first six months of 1940 Germany and Italy likewise bought no American aviation gasoline, practically all of the export going to Britain and France.)

The admiralty spokesman declined to discuss the round-up of espionage suspects on the ground it was still under way.

"It is entirely an internal affair," he said, "and it must be clear to everybody that national secrets during an emergency period must be strictly observed.

"The measures being taken are normal and in accordance with the law of the realm. It would be entirely irrelevant for Britain to take retaliatory measures. Also, it would cause trouble if correspondents should abuse their privileges by going beyond the legitimate bounds."

The chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Tokyo, Relman Morin, was questioned by Japanese gendarmes for several hours last night concerning his dispatches on the death of Melville James Cox, British newspaperman who died while under arrest in the alleged espionage round-up.

Morin was taken from his office to the gendarmerie headquarters for the questioning, during which time no communication with him was permitted. Japanese said that Cox jumped to his death from a window while being questioned.

(A Domei, Japanese news agency, dispatch received in Shanghai said Morin was accused of sending dispatches intimating that Cox's death was not a suicide. The Associated Press dispatches reported what British embassy officials had said on the case, and made no comment.)

Committee Will Seek Further Testimony on Measure Before Acting

National Guard Leaves Saturday For Pine Camp

Two Local Units of 156th Field Artillery Ready for Annual Summer Training Period

Battery A and Headquarters Battery, First Battalion, local units of the 156th Field Artillery of the National Guard, will leave Saturday morning for three weeks training at Pine Camp and DeKalb Junction where the members of the First Army will hold war maneuvers.

Members of the local units will meet at the state armory here on Saturday morning at 6 o'clock and will breakfast at 6:30 o'clock, leaving the armory at 8 o'clock. The Poughkeepsie and Newburgh units will leave at the same time and the entire regiment will unite at Albany and will bivouac for the night at Middleville Saturday night.

It is planned that the regiment will reach Pine Camp on Sunday where they will be stationed for one week, while the remaining two weeks will be spend at DeKalb Junction, near Canton where the regiment will take part in the First Army maneuvers.

Approximately 100,000 other troops of the Regular Army, National Guard and organized reserves will participate in the war games at DeKalb Junction.

During the first week at Pine Camp the members of the 156th Field Artillery together with the members of three other regiments will have service practice with French 75mm guns and 155mm howitzers.

The following two weeks the 156th Field Artillery will take part in the tactical program and war maneuvers of the First Army.

Under the orders issued all troop movements of the First Army will start Saturday morning.

Advance Detail

First Lieut. Harold V. Clayton, plans and training officer of the First Battalion of the 156th Field Artillery, left this morning with Captain C. H. Forbush, regimental supply officer, with an advance detachment for Pine Camp.

This is the first time in the history of the National Guard that the training period will be three weeks in length instead of the usual two weeks. The additional week was provided for by an appropriation made by Congress for that purpose.

Captain Ernest A. Steuding will be in charge of Battery A and the other officers are First Lieut. W. R. Reindel, and Second Lieuts. T. L. Flynn and J. J. Mikesh, while Captain F. L. Coombs will be in charge of the Headquarters Battery with First Lieut. A. W. Mitchell and Second Lieut. Andrew J. Schroeder.

Captain Charles N. Behrens, adjutant of the 156th Field Artillery, will also leave early Saturday morning with an advance detail for Pine Camp.

Today the state armory on Manor avenue was a busy place with members of the local units getting the equipment in shape for the movement of the units on Saturday morning.

Packs will be carried and include two blankets, one raincoat, one pole, five pins, rope, towel, wash cloth, tooth brush, tooth paste, mess kit, knife, fork, spoon, canteen, cup and cover, flash light, sun glasses. Gloves should be carried by drivers.

Barracks bags will be shipped Tuesday at 8 a. m., and will include two blankets, overcoat, bedsack, leather belt, necktie, denim coat, denim pants, denim hat, pair canvas leggings, pair cotton slacks, cotton shirt, wool shirt, pair shoes, three towels, three wash cloths, 3 cakes soap, razor kit, tooth paste, camera, musical instruments, bathing suit, etc.

Much Speculation

Newspaper reports that the National Guard may be mobilized for a year of service is causing much speculation among members of the local National Guard units as to whether they will be kept in active service at the close of the training period.

Some of the members of the local units are of the belief that at the close of the three weeks' training period that the regiment will return home, and that at that time those of the men who have no dependents and are in physical condition will continue under arms.

Sons of Legion Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Sons of Legion will be held at 7:15 tonight in the Legion Memorial Building.

Section Calling For the Registration of Men Between 21 and 30 Not to Be Disturbed

Trusteeship

President Will Discuss Hemisphere and National Defense

Washington, Aug. 1 (AP)—A proposal to limit to 1,000,000 the number of men who could be ordered into active training caused the Senate military committee today to seek further war department testimony on the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military service bill.

The limitation, suggested by Senator Lee (D.-Okla.) and seconded by Senator Bridges (R.- N. H.), would give the President specific authority to order conscription of 500,000 men between the ages of 21 and 30, inclusive, next October.

A further section of 500,000 men could be called early next year, although the date was not set in a rough draft of the amendment introduced at a closed committee session.

Senator Bridges said a committee agreed to hear war department officials on the question tomorrow morning, thus further delaying committee action which had been expected today.

Sections of the bill calling for registration of all males between 21 and 30 years, inclusive, would not be disturbed by the amendment, Bridges said.

Army officers previously had testified that from the 12,000,000 expected to register in this class, about 4,500,000 were expected to be available for training after all exemptions had been granted.

To Discuss Trusteeships

President Roosevelt called in three of his top military and foreign affairs advisers today for a conference expected to deal with the question of setting up trusteeships over threatened European possessions in this hemisphere.

The White House formally described the discussion as one which would be devoted to "hemispheric defense and national defense." Summoned to the meeting were Sumner Welles, acting secretary of the state; Admiral Harold R. Stark, naval operations chief, and General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff.

The trusteeship plan put forward by Secretary of State Hull won Pan-American support at the Havana conference this week. In substance it provides for the American nations to set up trus-

Daily Worker Sold

Distinguished Americans Buy Official Newspaper of Communist Party

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—Three women of distinguished American ancestry today became the owners of the Daily Worker, heretofore the official organ of the Communist party in the United States.

A statement said the women had formed the Freedom of the Press Company, Inc., which had purchased the Daily Worker and the Sunday Worker, adding: "We are the sole stockholders of that company and the only persons responsible for its formation."

Communist Party Leaders William Z. Foster, chairman, and Earl Browder, general secretary, declared that as of today the newspaper ceases to be "the official central organ of the Communist party." At the same time, they pledged the new owners "wholehearted" party support.

The new owners were listed as Mrs. Ferdinanda Reed, 63, granddaughter of the founder of the famed Brattleboro Sanatorium, Brattleboro, Vt.; Mrs. Caro Lloyd Strobell, 81, native of Pekin, Ill., and a Vassar College graduate, and Mrs. Susan H. Woodruff, 71, native of Tenafly, N. J., and an alumnus of Smith College.

The women asserted in a statement they had formed the new publishing company in order to preserve the paper "as a medium of free expression in the interest of the working people of America."

Named to an executive board to manage and edit the paper were: Louis F. Budenz, former editor of the midwest People's Record of Chicago and convention president for the Communist party in 1938; Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., negro staff member of the old Daily Worker; and Howard G. Boldt, all described as "newspapermen of proven ability."

Poultrymen Plan New Jersey Tour

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 1—All poultrymen are invited to the New York state poultry tour to New Jersey on August 5, 6, 7 and 8, announces R. C. Ogle of the poultry department at Cornell. The tour will start from Oswego on Monday morning, August 5, at 7 o'clock, daylight saving time, and from Ithaca at 9 o'clock.

Cars will go through Pennsylvania, with the first overnight stop at Trenton. Two stops will be made in Pennsylvania on August 5, and about 10 other farms will be visited in New Jersey on Tuesday and Wednesday. These include the Flemington egg auction, one of the oldest in the east, which will be in operation.

Among the farms to be visited is one reported to be the largest in the eastern part of the country, and another said to be the oldest laying battery commercial plant having home-made equipment that has been in use for 12 years. In addition the visitors will see some of the large breeding farms and a plant for dressing and killing birds that has an output of 15,000 broilers a day.

The trip of about 825 miles will be made by private cars. The cost should be reasonable enough for all poultrymen to take part, says Mr. Ogle. Some recreation is included on the trip, in addition to the educational value. More information may be had from R. C. Ogle, poultry department, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

How You Look at It

Tulsa, Okla. (AP) — "You are charged with running away and escaping from the weed gang," said Municipal Judge Walter Kimmel to an Indian, a defendant in municipal court. "Did you, or did you not do that?" "No, sir, judge," said the defendant, emphatically. "I just walked away, got drunk and failed to return."

AMERICA'S FINEST SINCE 1840

BALLANTINE'S Ale & Beer

What It Means:

The Farm Vote

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
(AP) Feature Service Writer

Washington—Behind the nominations of Charles McNary and Henry Wallace for Vice-President is a battle for 3,000,000 votes.

The master minds figure the McNary selection is the Republican way of asking so-called "farm states" to stand fast for 1940 or even increase the Republican showing in the 1938 off-year elections.

And they figure the President wanted to run with Wallace as a Democratic push to gain back ground lost to the G. O. P. in 1938.

Here's the way the master minds have it:

Between 1936 and 1938 nearly 3,000,000 votes cut loose from the Democratic party and attached themselves to the Republican party in the farm belt. The Republicans want to keep 'em where they are. The Democrats want to get 'em back.

The Vote Turned Over

The farm belt, of course, is a loose term. But it covers the nation's midriff, lying like a half moon across the map.

Its northern limit is the Canadian border. Its bottom rests on the cotton belt. Roughly it lies between Montana and Pennsylvania.

The 16 states in the belt are Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia.

In 1936 the Roosevelt sweep carried all those states. On the average the vote was 60 per cent Democratic, almost 40 per cent Republican.

But in the 1938 off-year elections, the pendulum swung much of the way back — more than half way. The Republicans got 51 per cent of the vote, the Democrats a little over 40.

The rest was scattered among Independents, Farmer-Laborites, Progressives.

The swing accounted for 2,700,000 votes. In short, 2,700,000 people who voted for the Democrats in 1936 changed and voted Republican in 1938.

So, assuming the vote sloughs off about 25 per cent during off-year elections, both parties are going to have to fight for 3,000,000 votes, or more, in the farm belt.

On the basis of past performance, the Republicans have the inside track. Ever since 1910, off-year gains have been a harbinger of victory in the next Presidential election.

In 1910, the Democrats picked up 46 new seats, won a majority in Congress. Then they voted in Wilson in 1912.

In 1918, the Republicans gained 26 seats, took over a House majority. That foreshadowed the Harding victory in 1920.

Again, in 1930, the Democrats gained 54 House seats, forged into the majority column. Roosevelt won his first victory in 1932.

Republicans Got No Majority

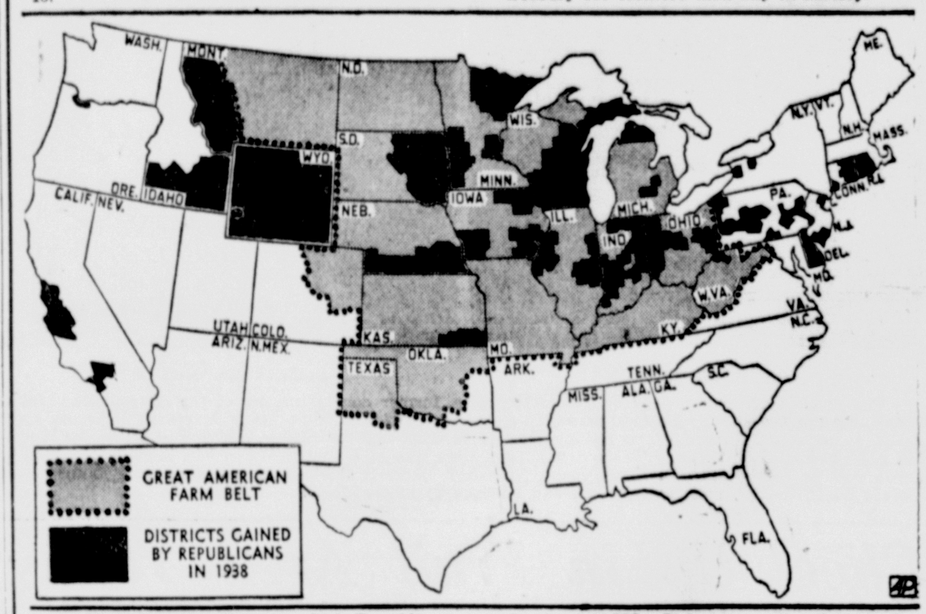

In the 1938 turnover, the Republicans netted 80 seats in the House, although they didn't reach a majority. Strangely enough, nearly all of those gains were either within the farm belt states or bordered on them.

The Republicans picked up 14 governorships. Most of them were in the farm belt.

All of this adds up to the fact that the farm vote may tell the tale in 1940.

Natural it was, then, that the Republicans should name Charles McNary, co-author of the McNary-Haugen farm bill, and a champion of the kind of farm legislation that gives the farmer protection similar to the tariff protection for labor and industry.

Natural it was, too, for the Democrats to seek out Henry Wallace, whose farm programs have pried more cash money from the Federal treasury for farmers than any in history.

Map shows territory in which Republicans scored gains in 1938. It is noteworthy that most of the districts where they made the gains were in the farm belt or closely adjoining it.

Find New Use For 'Hormones'

Efforts Made to Stop Drop of Apples While Green

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 1—When apples drop from the trees before they are ripe, orchardists suffer. Losses are especially noticed with the McIntosh variety. Today, however, numerous synthetic organic compounds, spoken of as "hormones" are being used to delay or prevent this drop. In reality there are growth-promoting chemicals which are sprayed on the fruit.

This spraying is new and cannot be recommended on a commercial scale in 1940, but many growers may want to try it in a limited way on a few trees of summer apples, says Professor M. B. Hoffman of pomology department at Cornell University.

The two chemicals found to be most promising for delaying the drop of apples are napthalene acetic acid and napthalene acetamide. The latter has not been tried on McIntosh in New York state, but has given good results on other varieties in other sections, he says.

Plenty of Power

"These chemicals are extremely powerful, and only minute amounts of the pure chemicals are required, something like two to four grams in 100 gallons of water. They are not common chemicals and have been produced mainly for experiments. As a result the cost of the materials in pure form has been too high for general use in orchard spraying, but possibly a market may be created in time."

Several chemical companies have expressed an interest in marketing a product in 1940 containing these "hormones," and they will probably be sold under various trade names, says Professor Hoffman. The spray is applied as though it were an insecticide or fungicide, and special attention should be given to thorough coverage and timeliness. Only fruit that is hit is affected.

"A single application checks the drop of most varieties for about two weeks; then the effect disappears and dropping is again resumed. On McIntosh, unfortunately, the spray is good for only eight to ten days, and another is desirable. The spray becomes effective between 24 and 48 hours after it is applied."

Crop Insurance inaugurated by the government with wheat showed its hazards in the first year of operation; for indemnity payments exceeded premium receipts by $2,150,000.

'Tips' on Spy Suspects Are Always Valuable

Many Come from N. Y. City's Foreign Sector; Many Espionage Rings in U. S.

By PAT McGRADY

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—The telephone on the G-man's desk rings, and a hollow, anonymous voice said: "H—— R——, of so-and-so street, Brooklyn, pretends he is studying radio engineering . . . he is really preparing to transmit spy messages . . . "

A bedraggled stranger, refusing to give his name, is ushered into the G-man's office and says: "I happen to know that that 'hobo' they arrested in Kansas City Friday is a foreign agent mapping American communications . . . "

Thousands of such "tips" on the spy and sabotage suspects flow daily in to the fifty offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation throughout the United States and its possessions. Hundreds of them originate in New York, which holds the world's largest foreign colonies and is the nation's nerve center.

Come by Letter

Some of the letters are from cranks, some from exceedingly naive persons and a few from people with a grudge against the "suspect."

But from this daily mass of mail the F.B.I. has received many valuable "tips," so they discourage none of it.

Without doubt, there are in the United States many foreign espionage rings. With the "fifth column" recently shown as one of the most effective instruments of war, there is equally no doubt in the minds of authorities that efforts have been made to transplant Europe's hates here, to stir up political, class, religious and racial warfare and to so "adjust" the morale of the people that it could not stand before the disciplined legions of invaders.

The F.B.I. is determined to eschew witch hunts. It discourages organized "sixth columns" activity against "fifth columns." But it seeks from citizens all useful information it can get on spies, saboteurs and provacateurs.

The F.B.I. force of 900, now being increased to 1,400 agents, since last September has been in sole charge of espionage and sabotage investigation. It is fed information by other government intelligence agencies.

Police Cooperate

Police forces throughout the country are cooperating in keeping close track of persons and organizations which in their relationship to foreign governments and systems are potential "fifth columns."

A primary problem of counter-espionage throughout the world is to thwart spies and saboteurs without breaking up their organization. It is much easier to scout old and established spy rings than to discover new ones that are substituted for those broken up or remnants that are driven underground.

Authorities readily admit that there is a real danger to the United States from subversive forces. But they expect that if the time should come for the fifth column to march it will be toward jail.

Safety Training Should Make Better Auto Drivers

Knoxville, Tenn., July 31—There is ample evidence that high school graduates will be better drivers than their parents as a result of the widespread opportunities for safety training in secondary schools, according to the American Automobile Association.

With thousands of high schools featuring traffic safety education and driver training—many with road training in dual control cars—the A. A. A. said there is a growing demand for instructors and more than 2,000 teachers have already been given special training in this field.

Simultaneously it was announced that a special two-week course in traffic safety education will be offered at the National Institute for Traffic Safety Training, at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, August 12 to 24. Dr. F. R. Noffsinger, A. A. A. Educational Consultant, has been assigned to conduct the Institute course.

"In the quest for ways to reduce traffic accidents," said Burton W. Marsh, A. A. A. director of safety and traffic engineering, "it was realized that training of new drivers was essential. The obvious place to reach these is in the high schools. It is a credit to the foresight of American educators that they were quick to realize the importance of traffic safety education in citizenship training. As a result, educators and traffic specialists collaborated in preparing the text material for this field of study."

Marsh declared that all phases of traffic safety education in elementary schools will be covered in the course. Enrollees meeting all course requirements will be awarded the A. A. A. certificate for trained teachers, an Institute certificate and also credits allowed by the College of Education, University of Tennessee.

Twin Antelopes at Nemiskam

Ottawa, Canada—Two antelope does, each with twin fawns, were observed recently at Nemiskam National Park in Alberta, the home of Canada's antelope herds. While the occurrence of twin fawns is not unusual among antelope, because of the timidity of these animals it is rarely observed. Reports of the park warden service also indicate that the antelope are thriving and a large number of fawns has increased the size of the herds.

FarmBureausNote Membership Gains

Total of 45,123 in State, Exceeds Last Year

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 1—The farm department of the New York state farm and home bureau 4-H club association reports a paid membership of 45,123 for 1940. This is 2,228 more than the total for 1939, according to Eear A. Flansburgh, state leader of county agricultural agents.

"It is particularly gratifying," Mr. Flansburgh says, "that the voluntary farm organizations have been able to maintain their memberships during the depression years." He says he regards the membership as the life blood of the state agricultural extension service because it represents the farmer's part in a cooperative educational job.

Farm bureau committeemen, who are unpaid, will no doubt be called upon, along with farmers of other farm organizations, to carry their load in any defense program which may fall to the agricultural interests of New York state, he points out.

In Mr. Flansburgh's the feeling of cooperation among committeemen and officers of all farm organizations in New York state is unequalled in the nation.

Examination To Be Held For Air-Brush Illustrators

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced open competitive examinations to fill air-brush illustrator positions in the federal government. The examinations cover four grades, with salaries ranging from $1,620 a year for the junior grade, to $2,300 a year for the senior grade. The salaries are subject to a deduction of 3½ per cent toward a retirement annuity.

Applications must be on file with the Commission's Washington office not later than August 26 if received from states east of Colorado, and not later than August 29, if received from Colorado and states westward.

STRIKING AT NATION'S STOMACH

The people are willing and anxious to dig down in their pockets for the billions which are necessary to defend the United States in a hostile world of force. But the people should not be expected to tolerate unnecessary drains on their incomes. Laws which deter enterprise and artifically boost the cost of living must be relegated to the scrap heap. "Anti-efficiency" laws directed at modern distribution methods are good examples of this kind of legislative negation.

An army fights on its stomach. The same is true of nations. We are not at war. But we are fighting against time to gain the power to survive in the event that war is ultimately forced into our hemisphere. By all odds one of the most essential tasks is the low-cost distribution of food and other necessities. This is the stuff on which morale is built—and it becomes all the more important at a time when the portion of national income absorbed by government is taking a sudden and drastic rise. America has perhaps the most efficient distribution system in the world. But pressure groups have been attacking this system on the ground that it is too big and too efficient! Many states have passed laws which, in effect, make economy and efficiency in distribution a crime.

What we need today is more efficiency, not less. We need more efficiency in our people, in our industries—and in our legislative halls. Business and political groups that spend their time in irrelevant sniping at imaginary evils of some other group, might well be looked upon with favor by the fifth columnist.

UNPUBLICIZED DESTRUCTION ..

The fire loss figures, staggering as they are, don't tell the whole story by a long shot. We may read, for instance, that fire destroyed some $400,000,000 worth of property and 10,000 lives in a year. But what of the destruction that never can be described in exact numbers?

Some of those fires burned factories. When that happened, men lost their jobs. Many of them had to go on relief. Their families suffered. Bills could not be paid. And everyone else in the community—grocer, doctor, banker, general store proprietor—felt the ill effect of reduced purchasing power.

Most of those fires destroyed taxable property. That meant that all other taxpayers eventually had to pay more, to make up for the loss. Even when a plant or home is immediately rebuilt, a period of time elapses before it is again carrying its normal share of the community tax load. And in many cases, rebuilding is long deferred, or is not undertaken at all.

Some of those fires devasted natural resources. And insurance can never compensate for what it takes nature hundreds of years to create.

Other fires destroyed books, paintings, family and legal documents, and property of a nature which is completely irreplaceable. Again, insurance, vital as it is, is helpless to make up for the loss.

Think of this next time you read figures concerning fire waste. It will give you a better idea of what an aggressive fire prevention movement, supported by all the people would mean to this country of ours.

TOSCANINI AND AMERICA

Players in the recently returned N.B.C. Symphony Orchestra have told how their conductor, Arturo Toscanini, celebrated the Fourth of July. They were in Montevideo on our national holiday. Toscanini called them together for what they expected to be an early morning rehearsal. When they were assembled he said:

"You are Americans and you are far from home. I have called you together to play 'The Star Spangled Banner'."

The men played as they had never played before, with no audience but the United States Minister to Uruguay. All were deeply moved by Toscanini's act.

It is easy to understand that the Italian-born musician who has defied dictators in the name of the freedom of art and who has recognized that music speaks a universal language, above race and nationalism, has a special feeling of gratitude and appreciation for American independence and democracy.

SPREADING OUT

John C. Riedel, engineer and member of the planning commission of New York City, is urging that metropolis to decentralize.

"The working people of New York are a harried group, rushing and jamming their way to centers of employment in the morning and repeating the process in the afternoon. They need a happier, more sensible mode of living. Industries should be located in different parts of the city with adequate room for workmen to live near by. If business organizations would spread out instead of piling up on Manhattan Island, they could not only do away with the transportation problem for their employees but would permit their workers to live in more healthful surroundings."

The truth of this criticism is being borne in upon dwellers of many cities smaller than New York but with much the same problems. Why, after all, have slums? Why not spread out and be comfortable? With all the pleasant vacant space in this country, how silly to cramp folks up till they can scarcely breathe!

SHORTER SKIRTS

Gilbert Adrian, stylist of a large movie studio, maintains that wars always shorten skirts. He says the scarcity of wool will make all skirts shorter by winter. Just why economy should call for long sleeves and high necks, he does not say. Maybe the little extra jackets so much in vogue the last few years will disappear and one long sleeve do the work of one and a half.

Dress materials will tend to be domestic rather than imported, Mr. Adrian adds—a prophecy which is easily explained by lack of shipping.

A further prophecy might be ventured—that useful knitting and making over for refugees and guest children will take the place of fancy quilt-making and embroidery to employ the leisure time of many hand-minded women. The needs of war deepen.

The big bad wolf has been busy in Denmark where 1,000,000 pigs are being killed because there is no feed for them.

SYMPTOMS OF HEART DISEASE

Like everybody else, I have often wondered why the heart was made the seat of the emotions. You hear or read of individuals whose heart was filled with rage, with fear, with hate, with jealousy, and other emotions.

As a matter of fact, these emotions may affect the heart in many ways causing it to beat more rapidly at times, to pound against the chest wall, to be irregular in its rhythm, cause tightening or partial closure of its blood vessels—angina pectoris, and other disturbances. That these emotions can caues symptoms exactly like those in true heart disease is now an accepted fact. This is especially true in young people. If there is already true or organic heart disease present, it is quite possible that these emotions may cause collapse or even death.

The three main symptoms in true heart disease are breathlessness, palpitation, and pain under breast bone, yet all these symptoms can be caused by the emotions, particularly fear, anxiety, and rage.

Most health writers mention breathlessness or gettting out of breath easily as the first symptom of heart disease. The first question asked by a heart specialist is "How far can you walk without getting out of breath?" From the answer to that question the physician or heart specialist often makes up his mind as to the real condition of the heart despite what the fluroscope (X-ray) or the electro-cardiogram show.

A favorite question also is whether the patient finds that he gets out of breath climbing a flight of stairs which formerly did not cause breathlessness, particularly if he has not put on excess weight. Sir James McKenzie, the father of modern treatment of heart disease, was the first to point out that a heart might have murmurs and irregularities but if the patient could climb a hill or walk a certain distance at a definite rate of speed without getting out of breath, he had a "strong" heart.

It should be remembered, of couse, that lack of oxygen or too much carbon dioxide in the blood due to a blocked nose or eating too much protein food—eggs, meat, fish—in proportion to fruit and vegetables, causes breathlessness.

A very heavy meal, particularly when gas forming foods have been eaten, can also cause breathlessness, palpitation, and pain under breast bone.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

It was during the early 1900's that Philip Elting, for over 30 years the widely known leader of the Republican party in Ulster county, began to attract political notice in Kingston and Ulster county. In 1908 he was serving Kingston as its corporation counsel under the administration of Walter P. Crane as mayor.

Mr. Elting resigned the office in January, 1909, and was succeeded by the late Arthur C. Connelly, who became corporation counsel in February, 1909. Mr. Connelly, who was then a young man, became one of the best known lawyers in Kingston, and the later years of his life were devoted largely to the affairs of the uptown building and loan association.

During the many years that Mr. Elting has directed the policies of the Republican party in the county he has become the best known man in Ulster county. As to his political activities even those of an opposite political faith confess that he is without an equal in guiding the affairs of a political organization.

The year 1909 marked also the holding of the first military ball under Captain George F. Chandler in the state armory—now the Municipal Auditorium—on Broadway. The affair was one of the most brilliant social successes held in the city in years.

The reception committee consisted of Mrs. George F. Chandler, Mrs. Everett Fowler, Mrs. G. D. B. Hasbrouck, Mrs. John D. Schoonmaker, Mrs. George Hutton and Mrs. A. E. Anderson. They were all women who for years had been active in the social life of the city. Of that number but few are still living.

The music for dancing was furnished by Zita's orchestra, while the newspaper reports state that the armory decorations were unique and beautiful.

Members of the Kingston police department were made happy by the action taken on February 5, 1909, in voting to increase the wages paid the members of the department. The patrolmen who had been working for $60 a month received an increase to $70 a month; the sergeants were increased from $75 to $87.50 per month, and the police chief from $100 to $116.66 per month.

In order to meet the increase in salaries to the police the council decided to increase the amount of the annual appropriation to the police board from $15,000 to $18,000.

Another interesting event in February of 1909, was the awakening of the Ulster County Committee of the State Charities' Aid from a slumber of four years by meeting at the home of Mrs. A. V. V. Kenyon, the secretary of the organization.

Some 15 members attended the meeting and the following officers were elected: President, John Forsyth; vice presidents, Mrs. Julia Dillon and Theodore Brink; treasurer, F. J. R. Clarke, and secretary, Mrs. William Lawton.

"The American Presidency"
By Harold J. Laski

Our required reading list for August begins with Harold J. Laski's "The American Presidency." Flat statements are dangerous for book reviewers as well as for the general run of men, yet at this distance it seems unlikely that the year will furnish a more healthy, clearer or more timely discussion of a major American problem than Mr. Laski's latest. Witness:

"I am not here urging that a president is infallible; the evidence is too grimly the other way. My argument is, first, that a democracy needs clear direction, and that it cannot get this unless the central motive force in a political system rests in the executive's hands. He may be right or wrong; what is important is that the plans put into operation should essentially be plans for which he is willing to accept full responsibility. And, secondly, it is not possible in the modern state to separate legislation from administration."

And again:

"Just as it is an open question whether the division of powers between the federal government and the states is any longer compatible with efficient administration, even more, with full response to social needs, so it is an open question whether the system of checks and balances is not incompatible, as it is now operated, with a proper relation between executive and legislature....Nor is there assurance that, when the time demands great leadership, it will be necessarily forthcoming. ...There is rather the danger that, in any save the gravest crisis, any continuous attempt to transcend the implications of the checks and balances will result in the charge of dictatorship."

The temptation to quote is present on almost every page of "The American Presidency." Mr. Laski is an Englishman. He is careful to assess the dangers of criticism by an outsider of institutions to which he was not born. But it is equally evident that when an outsider is really familiar with the institutions, his critical position is less likely to be prejudiced by his experience, and expediency, than that of one born to the system. It is this fact which makes Mr. Laski's book valuable. The book is, reduced to a phrase, a reasoned plea that before it is too late America grant its president great power, because "great power alone makes great leadership possible."

Congress Facing the Problem of Selecting an Army Without Disrupting Industrial Status of the United States

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Aug. 1.—The principal argument for the selective service draft is that industry is not disorganized as it is supposed to be under a volunteer system in which the most patriotic, who are often the most essential to the defense industries, do the volunteering. But the truth is the sponsors of the present movement to build up the army are already disregarding the principle of selection by ordering into immediate service both the National Guard and the Reserve Officers Corps.

In these two groups are many men who occupy key posts in industry and in the management of enterprises vital to the national welfare. But as yet nobody has arisen in the government to say that only those who can be spared shall go into military training. There has been talk of letting men resign from the National Guard who have dependents and who could not manage financially by the change, but as yet no movement has arisen to withhold from service the patriotic men in the National Guard who will not wish to resign or claim exemption at this time, but who cannot really be spared from their work.

In the Officers Reserve Corps are many men whose departure from accustomed pursuits will leave serious vacancies in the business world. The employer is to be asked to hold open these positions, in fact he is going to be required by law to take the men back even though he may have filled their places in the interim.

With respect to common labor, this is a rather simple thing to do, but in businesses and enterprises where professional men and those of technical training are employed, it will be next to impossible to engage substitutes when they have to be told that they cannot have a steady job. Who that has ability and talent wants to accept employment for one year when he may have an opportunity elsewhere for a permanent position?

Likewise the employers of the country who might possibly manage to take care of vacancies by stretching the hours of those who do not enter military service must pay time and a half for such overtime and, in some instances, are completely prevented from staggering the hours of service to take care of emergencies because of the heavy penalties of expense imposed by the wage and hour law.

The Roosevelt administration, however, insists there must be no changes in the wage and hour law or the Wagner act for that matter because no matter how vital to national defense, these so-called "social gains" must not be impaired. The truth is they must not be impaired between now and election for it is inevitable they will be impaired after election no matter which of the two presidential candidates is elected. It is impossible for the industrial system to operate on a 40-hour week and speedily get the skilled labor and the productive output essential to the manufacture of the mechanized equipment for war purposes.

There seems to be a great hurry to demoralize the industrial machine by insisting on putting the National Guard and the Officers Reserve Corps into action irrespective of the essentiality of the personnel to defense industries and irrespective, too, of the fact that men between 21 and 31 may now occupy jobs in the skilled labor field where there is already a shortage.

The Senate military affairs committee has made some changes in its proposal with respect to the age limits to be summoned to service, but there will have to be many more changes in the measure before it can accomplish its objective of selecting an army without disrupting industry.

It is significant that the Burke-Wadsworth bill itself was never endorsed except as to principle by President Roosevelt. Perhaps it was considered good politics by the administration to have a Democratic senator, who was recently defeated for renomination and has announced his intention of supporting the Republican nominee, and a Republican representative in the House sponsor the conscription bill. Theoretically the administration is not accepting responsibility for a measure which is the subject of widespread criticism. Maybe the plan was to let the first bill run through the gauntlet of criticism and then the administration would lend its support to an amended proposal. But thus far the conscription measure is really the responsibility of the Democratic party in both houses just as failure to prepare America's national defenses is a responsibility of the Democratic party. The fact that the Republicans missed the bus while a minority party doesn't excuse the Democratic party which could always command a majority for so-called social measures at any time the President wanted to put the heat on Congress.

Conscription will gain more adherents when it is operated on a truly selective principle and when the sponsors of such measures do now throw a scare into the country by asking for registration of all adults from 18 to 65 in the face of an unexplained need. It is the hidden purpose and the unrevealed objective which shake the confidence of the people in their government, especially in times when the regimenting of citizens under government control is the basis for unfortunate suspicions related to domestic policies and legislation.

The conscription bill will probably go through Congress so as to register boys from 21 to 31, but promising that a relatively small number shall be called. Yet the pressure for a voluntary enlistment system based on the selective principle is growing every day. Nobody knows—because it hasn't been tried—just how many troops could be secured by a patriotic drive and by permitting the boys in the CCC camps to volunteer at the same rate of pay they are now getting. It is just as easy to reject those young men who should not volunteer as it is to withhold acceptance of those who are drafted, but who should be permitted to remain at work in key industries.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By Jack Stinnett

Washington — Out of almost every major event that occurs in or affects Washington comes a plethora of stories. Some are fantastic, some are trial balloons released by the powers-that-be to test public reactions, and some are merely ridiculous. Still others are a clear-minded analysis of a situation.

Wading through these stories daily, I try to pass along only those that have some basis in reason, interest or logic. Occasionally I run across one I can not tab, but which seems worth passing along. Of such is the following. It is interesting and reasonable, but whether it is somebody's pipe dream or has its roots in truth I haven't the slightest idea.

It is that President Roosevelt, if he is re-elected, has no intention of serving out a third term.

Some People Say—

This story, which has been kicked around for some time, is causing many an argument over coffee and crumpets.

Those who contend for it argue this way: The President was absolutely sincere in his statement that he did not wish to run again. Months ago, he told not only intimates but Republican Col. Frank Knox, who now is in his Cabinet, that he doubted if he could stand the strain of another four years in the White House.

Starting with the court fight, the attempted party purges of 1938, the neutrality act, and the thousands of problems arising out of the war in Europe and the new defense measures, these persons say, the President has been through a lot at the tail end of his second term, not to mention the battles of the first. Look at what is ahead in the next few months. Is it any wonder he is tired and feels the need of rest and retirement?

And one thing more, they argue: Why did Roosevelt select Henry A. Wallace as his 1940 running mate? Admitted that Wallace, as secretary of agriculture and head of the Agricultural Adjustment administration, controls personnel and funds that affect millions of voters, wouldn't F. D. R., as the prime force behind it all, have received all of those votes anyway? It doesn't detract from Wallace's ability as an economist, farm specialist and administrator to admit that he is no great shakes as a political campaigner, when one seemed desperately needed on the ticket this year. Then, why Wallace? Because, more than any other vice-presidential possibility, he could be depended upon to carry on, without disruption, the New Deal reforms and New Deal ideologies.

No Use Asking

Therefore, the upholders of this theory conclude, when the world crisis is over, when the ship is again on even keel, Roosevelt, if he is elected, will relinquish the helm and take the long rest he so much needs.

But it wouldn't do any good to ask him. Just as announcement of his third term plans possibly would have weakened his position both in the capitol and abroad, so would any such hint from him weaken the power and strength of the Presidency when the country needs it most.

Well, that's the story anyway.

Announce Lower Rate of Payment

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 1—Rates at which payments will be computed under the 1940 agricultural conservation program, in which some 76,000 New York state farmers are enrolled, are announced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

A statement received by Earl A. Flansburgh, state executive officer, says the rates will be 10 per cent less than the tentative rates indicated last November. These adjustments are necessary, it is said, in order that payments will not exceed the available funds. The revision was made under the provision that rates of payment are subject to appropriation available and to upward or downward adjustment for participation by as much as 10 per cent.

In 1937, it is pointed out, the rates were increased 10 per cent; in 1938 no adjustments were made; and in 1939, rates were decreased 10 per cent on certain crops.

The use of a portion of the appropriation for the 1940 program for the completion of payments under the 1939 program was authorized by Congress, the statement says. "This transfer of funds was made necessary by larger than anticipated participation in the 1939 program and to cover advances in connection with the grant-of-aid and crop insurance programs for that year. The result was to decrease the amount available for 1940 program payments."

Payments which are under $200, after being computed at the revised rates, will be increased in accordance with the small payment provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Parity payments which are made under a separate appropriation are not affected.

Wild turkeys that weighed from 30 to 40 pounds were often sold for 25 cents apiece in the 1700's.

Most Easily Prepared Meats May Be Cooked Out-of-Doors

The lure of outdoors and the ever growing vogue for touring, camping and picknicking are creating a new interest in outdoor cooking. Appetites are keen and food is never more fully appreciated than when prepared and eaten about the campfire.

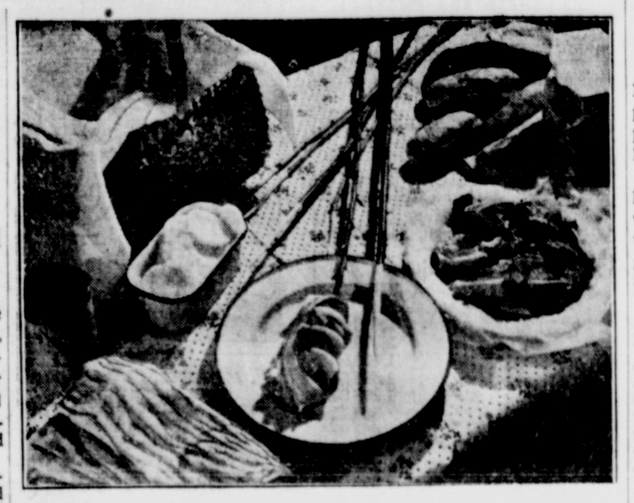

Outdoor cooking presents certain problems, however. The food must be substantial, simple and easy to prepare. There is no time for fancy dishes or for those which require long cooking. And you will probably not carry elaborate utensils in which to cook your picnic lunch or supper.

If a tasty and substantial meat dish is chosen, the basis of the outdoor meal is sure to be right. The rest of the meal can consist of foods prepared at home, or those which require no cooking, as fruits and raw vegetables, potato chips, and so on.

Open Grill Broiled Steak

A thick, juicy steak, broiled over an open grill, is surely a perfect main dish for a picnic. Success is not hard to attain, if you follow the basic rules for broiling steak, which apply outdoors as well as in your home kitchen. The steak should be placed over a bed of glowing coals, after the flames have died down, and it should be placed at a distance for enough so that it will be cooked half way through by the time one side is nicely browned. Allow plenty of time for broiling a thick steak. One cut 1½ inches thick will require about forty minutes.

Here is something really special as the main dish for an outdoor meal. It is not only delicious but it is fun to cook. Cubes of lamb are arranged with onion slices on pointed sticks and roasted over the campfire. Lamb from shoulder or leg is cut into one-inch cubes. First place one end of a long strip of bacon on a stick, then alternate cubes of lamb and onion slices, and lastly thread the other end of the bacon over the tip of the stick. Broil over a bed of coals, turning the meat until it is nicely browned and cooked through.

Potatoes, wrapped in green leaves, buried in the hot embers, can be roasted while the meat is cooking.

Other Picnic Favorites

Other meats which are favorites for outdoor cooking are frankfurters, bacon, Canadian style bacon, ham and chipped beef. Lamb, cut into inch squares aud threaded on skewers, is another delicious meat when broiled over an open fire.

Combinations of quickly cooked meats and vegetables, to be prepared in a skillet, make fine main dishes for hungry picnickers. For instance, here is a mixture of bacon and corn, called Squaw Corn, which is a favorite with campers and boy scouts.

Squaw Corn

8 slices bacon
½ cup grated onion or
½ cup grated green pepper
1 can cream or whole kernel corn
Salt and pepper

Cut bacon into small pieces and cook slowly until brown but not crisp. Add onion or green pepper as desired. Cook slowly for five minutes. Add corn. Season and heat thoroughly.

Lamb, Hunter Style

2 pounds lamb
6 slices bacon
6 onions, sliced
Salt and pepper

Have lamb from shoulder or leg cut in 1-inch squares. Choose a strong pointed green stick about a quarter inch thick. Or use a heavy iron wire fork as a skewer. Thread a slice of bacon onto the skewer, then alternate squares of lamb, tomato and onion. Last of all thread the other end of the bacon slice over the stick. Broil over hot coals, but not over a blaze. When the outside is browned, hold farther from the coals so that it will cook more slowly.

"Save the pieces" and bring them here and we'll quickly replace perfectly.

S. STERN
ESTABLISHED 1860
42 B'WAY—PHONE KINGSTON 127-W

Ithaca, N. Y.—Lawyers of the Sixth Judicial District of the state of New York will brush up on current problems of the practicing lawyer at a three-day "Lawyers Institute" to be held August 15-17 at Cornell University, under the joint auspices of the Cornell Law School and the Federation of Bar Associations of this district.

Culbertson Gives Up Playing Cards, Eye on Congress

Ridgefield, Conn., Aug. 1 (AP).—Ely Culbertson, who has stopped playing bridge (?), has gone into politics with all the enthusiasm he ever gave to cards because:

"The American people have handsomely supported, showered wealth upon me, and now I want to do something to express my gratitude, to serve them in Congress and do what I can for them."

So the "king of bridge" is gunning for the Democratic nomination as Connecticut's congressman-at-large. Party leaders haven't said yet what they think of his candidacy, but at the Chicago national convention Culbertson was seen several times with the state chairman and the party's national committeeman.

"They ask so much in America 'why don't some of these rich men get into politics and seek to better it?' Well, that's what I'd like to do—to do something for the underdog," he says.

Culbertson, born in Russia of an American father whose ancestry made him eligible to join the Sons of the American Revolution, promises, if nominated, to campaign in Ukrainian, French, Russian, German and Italian—all languages with which he is familiar.

His interest in the study of government dates back to the days when he was a student at the Ecole Superieure des Sciences Economique et Politiques at Paris.

Culbertson doesn't play bridge now, but he gives daily attention to his syndicated column on the game, publication of a bridge magazine and his school for bridge teachers. Friends doubt he has quit playing permanently.

Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson, divorced but on extremely friendly terms, occupy a 65-acre estate here, he living in the mansion house and she in one of the six "cottages"—actually large residences—on the property. Their children, 12-year-old Joyce and 11-year-old Bruce, spend five months a year with their mother and the other seven with their father.

Parents should help youngsters learn at an early age how to say the right thing over the telephone in the simplest, most considerate way, advises Mary Katherine McMeans in a recent article in Parents Magazine.

Interlocutory Decree

Mary Pizzo of New York city has been granted an interlocutory degree of divorce dissolving her marriage to Angelo Pizzo of Marlborough. Michael Nardone appeared for plaintiff. The action was tried before Justice Pierce H. Russell. Under the decree, which will become final in three months, the plaintiff may remarry but the defendant is forbidden to marry. The parties were married at Marlborough on June 6, 1920, and the acts upon which the decree was granted are alleged to have been committed about February 10,1940, at Balmville.

Census Counters Find That 13 Cities Are in Different Rank

Washington, Aug. 1 (AP)—Census counters scrambled population standings of America's big cities today to create a "25-biggest" list for 1940.

The list generally includes the same cities as in 1930, but 13 of the 25 have different ranks than 10 years ago.

Houston, Texas, and Denver, Colo., made the grade for the first time, crowding out Jersey City, N. J., and Portland, Ore. Houston claimed the biggest jump, from 26th to 21st. Jersey City had the worst fall of the big cities, from 23rd to 30th.

Philadelphia, Cleveland, St. Louis, Boston, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Newark, and Rochester, N. Y., showed losses.

Preliminary figures give the top 25 places to these cities:

THIMBLE THEATRE — LOVE AT FIRST FRIGHT — Registered U. S. Patent Office — STARRING POPEYE

N. Y. Motorists Pay More Taxes Than Any Group

Motorists of New York state have well earned the title of the state's "Number 1 Taxpayer," according to Edward D. Cray, secretary of the New York Petroleum Industries Committee.

Total taxes paid by motorists to the state for the privilege of operating their vehicles reached $118,189,000 in the 1939 calendar year, according to the Federal Roads Administration. State gasoline taxes, registration fees and miscellaneous motor vehicle fees make up this figure, an average of $44.51 per vehicle.

Said Mr. Cray, "The budgetary estimate of total automobile taxes to be collected by the state in the fiscal year of 1940 is $120,000,000. Governor Lehman announced that approximately $1,000,000 more than had been anticipated from gasoline tax and motor vehicle taxes had been collected during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940. This indicates that the total automotive tax revenue will exceed $120,000,000 during this period. The estimated diversion of highway funds during this year is approximately $73,000,000.

"During the last nine fiscal years, approximately $893,000,000 has been collected from the motorists of New York state in automotive taxes. During the same period the enormous sum of $460,000,000 has been diverted to purposes far removed from highway construction and maintenance.

"New York state motorists contribute a large amount in general taxes toward the state's welfare as a whole in addition to the excessive taxes they pay so that they may own and operate a motor vehicle.

"Therefore, the taxes imposed on this group collected for roads should be used exclusively for highway purposes," Mr. Cray concluded.

Caroline J. Swift Will Filed

New York, July 31 (Special)—The will of the late Caroline J. Swift of Kingston and New York, was filed for probate today in Surrogates Court here. It disposes of property declared "more than $20,000." Mrs. Swift bequeathed the bulk of her estate to the children of her late husband, the Rev. Judson Swift. Mrs. Swift died July 13 in Kingston.

Anne Moore Estate

New York, July 31 (Special)—Included in the estate of the late Miss Anne Moore of Woodstock and New York, according to an appraisal here today by the New York State Transfer Tax Department, was real estate in Woodstock valued at $2,900. Her entire estate was set at $34,266, gross, and $31,479, net value. Most of it is divided in equal shares among Roger Moore, brother, Louis Moore, brother, Maurice Moore, nephew, all of Wilmington, N. C., and Mrs. Mary E. Mills of Greenville, S. C. Miss Moore died September 25, 1939.

Individuals Need Kicking Instead of Government

Croatan, N. C., Aug. 1 (AP)—It's been three years since Craven County Commissioner Tom Haywood built his self-kicking machine.

Perhaps you don't know what is a self-kicking machine. Well, when you have done something that you feel you shouldn't have, and want to kick yourself for it, Haywood's machine will do it for you.

The self-kicking machine was erected July 27, 1937, on Highway 70, often called "North Carolina's Broadway."

Several hundred of those who have been kicked belong to "the Self-Kicking Club of America." The members are scattered in every state of the Union and in some foreign countries.

To use the self-kicking machine you just stand before it and work a gadget and the shoes revolve on the belt and kick you in the favorite place for all kicks.

Haywood says one reason for his machine's increasing popularity is—but let him tell it:

"Some of us who have been kicking previously about America and our form of government are now kicking ourselves after seeing the condition of other countries. We are finding that we are the ones that should be kicked, not our American government."

Music Business Is Stimulated By War Jitters

Chicago, Aug. 1 (AP)—War jitters were credited today with helping to boom the music business.

William Howard Beasley, of Dallas Tex., president of the National Association of Music Merchants, said that manufacturers and dealers expected to sell between 135,000 and 140,000 new pianos this year, which would make 1940 the best year for the sale of manual pianos since 1925.

Makers and distributors of other instruments, he said, also had reported notable gains in sales, best sellers including trumpets, clarinets, saxophones (which are returning to popular favor after a slump) and guitars.

Beasley, whose association is sponsoring the annual music industries convention, attributed the expanded sales of musical instruments to four major factors.

"The uncertainties in world affairs, emphasized by preponderant attention given to news of the European war and its implications," he said, "have led many persons to occupy their spare time with music. More and more persons are finding a release from the tenseness and uneasiness experienced everywhere today, in some sort of musical expression."

Other factors he enumerated were better music appreciation, brought about through motion pictures and the radio, improved teaching of music in the schools and the advances made in the manufacture of instruments.

ingston Moose Lodge Plans Dance and Frolic

At the last regular meeting of ingston Lodge, 970, Loyal Order Moose, active plans were formulated for the first annual Moose social event, "the Moose Midsummer Frolic," which is to be held at the Moose Hall on Friday evening, August 23.

Joseph F. Ross, Jr., was named chairman of the affair and he appointed the following members of the lodge to comprise the ticket committee: Michael Shank, Joseph Fabiano, George W. Moore, Lester Van Demark, Fred Costello, Anthony Erena, William Robinson, Anthony Slezak and Jacob Berinato. Inasmuch as this social event is to be an annual affair under the auspices of the local lodge, elaborate preparations are being made to insure the Moose members, their friends, and the public of an enjoyable evening of dancing pleasure. A jitterbug contest, a waltz contest and a mammoth balloon frolic have been arranged to feature this gala dance carnival. The Moose Hall will be decorated for the occasion under the supervision of Mr. Ross. A patriotic theme will be prominent in the decoration and the Ambassador Orchestra will furnish the music for dancing. Tickets may be procured from any member of the committee or any member of the lodge.

Plain curtains, without a pattern, are usually effective when the rugs and other furnishings in the room do have a pattern.

Another Chance To Show Skill

Prizes Offered at State Fair for Homemade Rigging

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 1—For the third year, an exhibit of homemade farm equipment will be a part of the New York state fair at Syracuse, August 25 to September 2, under the supervision of James S. Morse of Levanna, New York. Numerous prizes are available in various classes.

Any and all kinds of homemade equipment, for farm or home, may be shown; any device which contributes to labor-saving or safety is encouraged, but patented articles are not eligible.

The classes include those for field machinery, stock trailers, farm trailers, tractors, poultry house equipment and farm shop equipment. Incidentals suggested may be electric stackers, elevators, cement mixers, safety devices, seed graders, advertising methods, mail boxes, and others.

Special prizes are offered for the best safety device, the best self-feeder for calves on pasture, for the greatest originality in invention, for the best household hold appliance, and others.

Competiton is open only to New York state residents, and exhibits must be in place by Sunday, August 25.

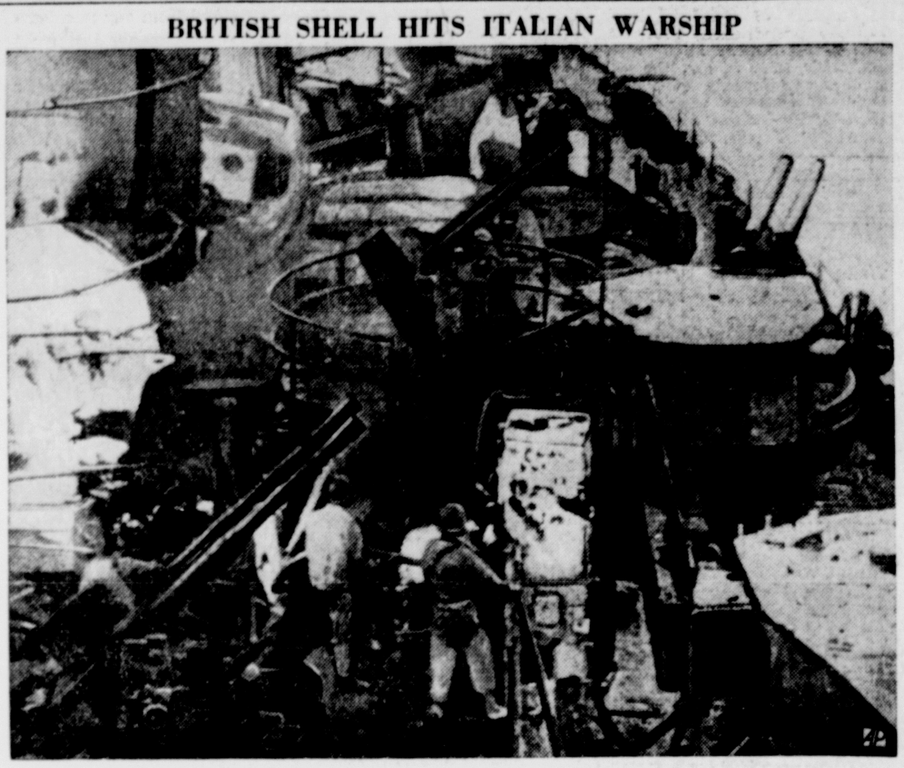

Mr. Morse says the entries last year attracted considerable attention among farmers and visitors to the fair. This year, as in 1939, farm cooperatives are also donating prizes. More information about the exhibit may be had either from Mr. Morse or from the New York state fair commission at Syracuse.

BRITISH SHELL HITS ITALIAN WARSHIP

Red Cross Assures Germans Will Not Benefit by Gifts

The New York Chapter of the American Red Cross, for the first time since the beginning of the European war last September, has received during the last ten days hundreds of inquiries by mail and telephone, asking whether Germany is receiving any benefits from Red Cross relief shipments to the war-stricken areas of Europe.

While no one at the chapter headquarters, 315 Lexington avenue, could say what had caused the flood of questions, an official yesterday amplified the recent radio address of Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, by saying that of $8,000,000 in cash and relief supplies sent to Europe by the American Red Cross since September, "not one cent or one article has gone to the Germans."

The Red Cross is in the position of a trustee, he said, receiving funds to be spent for the benefit of war victims, and for anyone but these victims to receive the funds or articles bought with them would constitute a breach of trust. Accordingly, the American Red Cross will not attempt to administer relief in any territory where it does not have complete freedom of action and the right of inspection to insure that its measures of relief benefit only those for whom they are intended.

At the outbreak of the war the American Red Cross asked the Red Cross societies of the belligerent nations—England, France, Poland and Germany—what relief they wanted, for it is a fixed principle of the organization to send to any country only such relief as is requested by its own Red Cross Society. England, France and Poland accepted the offer. Germany rejected it with thanks, saying that no relief was needed. No attempt, accordingly, has been made to send relief to Germany.

After the partition of Poland the American Red Cross was unable to make satisfactory arrangements to act in Germany or Russian Poland, but received freedom of action and right of inspection in the German-dominated buffer state known as the Government General.

In this area was established three distribution points for relief supplies, with an American representative from Washington at each point. The distribution of relief was carried out, and still is being carried out, principally through local Catholic and Jewish organizations.

The best proof that supplies for Poland reached their intended recipients and did not benefit the Germans, a Red Cross official pointed out, was that all supplies for Poland had to pass the British contraband control.

After the Russian attack on Finland the American Red Cross, at the request of the Finnish organization, started a program of Finnish relief, and still continues through shipments to the Arctic port of Petsamo.

The German invasion of Norway was the signal to start sending relief to the Norwegians, and supplies were flown from England. Since the Nazis completed their occupaiton of the country, however, it has not been possible to work out satisfactory arrangements for relief administration, and the only activity since then has been the sending of supplies to Stockholm for Norwegian refugees in Sweden.

Until May 10, when the German drive in the west began, the American Red Cross had spent $1,800,000 for war relief. Then, when hundreds of thousands of Dutch, Belgians and, finally, French were driven from their homes, it became necessary to increase the spending. A campaign was started to raise $10,000,000 for war victims. Within a short time the goal was raised to $20,000,000, of which $19,823,510 has been subscribed. To date, $8,000,000 has been spent.

In occupied France, $50,000 worth of food was shipped to Paris, but it was explained that this did not constitute a departure from precedent as the food was bought with money exclusively donated for this purpose.

Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, American Red Cross delegate in Paris, remained there after the German occupation and, with the co-operation of the American Hospital in Paris, gave emergency medical relief to wounded soldiers in the Paris area.

Relief distribution continues in unoccupied France. The Red Cross mercy ship McKeesport arrived at Marseilles July 15 with a $1,000,000 cargo of relief supplies.

Shipments are being made on a large scale to England. Among these are consignments of supplies for the hospitals which the British are expanding against a day when a mass attack on England may bring large-scale casualties. The British especially need surgical instruments for which they formerly relied on Germany. The Red Cross is sending quantities of American-made instruments.

Alone in New York

New York (AP) — A police patrol wagon chauffeur blithely drove four miles through midtown traffic while, unknown to him, an officer and a prisoner locked in the compartment behind fought a furious battle. A second prisoner in the van remained neutral until gunplay was threatened. Then he went to the officer's rescue.

After spending a day and almost all his pennies at the New York World's Fair, a small boy stopped at an attended public telephone station in the Pennsylvania Terminal and tried to telephone his parents at their Long Island home. Crying, he told an attendant that his folks must be dining out. She had him wait and in an hour his mother answered his call. Soon the boy was homeward bound with borrowed carfare. The next day members of the family came to say "thank you" and return the carfare.

Roadside Court

Brookfield, Mo. (AP) — Accommodating. That's Justice W. J. Carlon. When a bus driver was arrested for speeding, Carlon held court in the bus so as not to upset the cross country schedule. The driver paid his $5 fine promptly.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Prowling Cop

St. Louis—For several nights, police patrolled a restricted residential district on complains of residents that a suspicious-looking man, carrying a club, had been seen there.

The cops caught up with the "prowler." He was a recently-hired private night watchman.

Seeing America First

Yellowstone Park, Wyo. — Two women tourists stopped Ranger George Kennaugh. "Where can we see the rest of the monkeys?"

He explained that monkeys couldn't stand the climate but the guests insisted "we just saw two."

A moment later Kennaugh was hit by a pine cone. Then another, and another. Two monkeys were firing the cones at him from a tree.

The monkeys had escaped from a traveling zoo.

Protection Requested

Rocky Mountain National Park, Colo.—Two elderly women tourists drove up to the park gate just as Ranger Walter O'Brien handed a gun back to some other tourists. The gun had been sealed for their visit, in accordance with pak regulations.

O'Brien waved the two women on but they appeared hesitant about driving into the park. Finally one asked:

"Ranger, aren't you going to give us a gun, like the other cars?"

Sow's Surprise

Kane, Ill.—For two weeks Henry Hyde was unable to locate one of his hogs. Finally he dug into a fresh straw stack that had buried a small shed.

Inside he found the sow—with nine little pigs, born during the mother's accidental imprisonment at threshing time.

Eye for Comfort

Omaha, Neb.—Omaha residents who sleep on the Central High School lawn these hot nights know their stuff.

They plant themselves in a proper spot under a tree so that when the sun rises in the morning they'll be in the shade.

Windsors Travel as Capt. and Mrs. Wood

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 1 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, traveling as "Captain and Mrs. Wood," were to sail for New York aboard the American export liner Excalibur at 6 p. m., today (12 noon, E. S. T.). The ship is due in New York August 9.

En route to the Bahamas, where the Duke will take over his post as governor and commander-in-chief, the famous couple will make the trip aboard the 9,359-ton cargo liner with Maj. Gray Phillips, the Duke's secretary, and his two aides de camp, Capt. George Wood and Capt. Vyvyan Drury.

None of their household staff is expected to travel with the Duke and Duchess.

For the man who renounced kingdom and empire for "the woman I love," the trip will be in strange contrast to his previous visits to the United States—in 1919, when he went there as official good will ambassador and was greeted with one of Broadway's first post-war showers of ticker tape, and in 1924 when, as now, he traveled "incognito" and, except for a formal visit to President Coolidge, devoted all of his time to making the rounds of gay social functions on Long Island and elsewhere.

Also sailing on the Excalibur will be William Phillips, U. S. ambassador to Rome, who is going home for a brief vacation; Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., U. S. ambassador to Poland; John Cudahy, ambassador to Belgium; and George Gordon, minister to the Netherlands. Most of the other passengers will be war refugees of various nationalities.

The summer months committee of the Willing Workers, of the Reformed Church will hold a silver tea an dfood sale in the Community Hall, Tuesday, August 6, at 2:30 p. m. A hobby show will be held and an entertainment given. Miss Helen Lyons is chairman.

Mrs. Theodore Bridgman of New York was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gardner the past week.

The Rev. and Mrs. F. R. Bosch and family left Tuesday morning for their vacation trip to Pella, Ia., where his parents live.

William Hunter, of Flushing, L. I., will occupy the pulpit Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Sunday school will be at 10 a. m.

Those present were: Thelma Christian, Joan Hammesfahr, Mona and Dawn Mack, Betty Teller, Nancy Moran, Peter Lawrence, Arthur Woessner, Jackie and Thomas McHugh.

Mr. and Mrs. George Decker and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Masten spent Sunday at Fairfield Beach, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wright of Mahwah, N. J., and their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. James Brazil, who recently returned from Cairo, Egypt, where Mr. Brazil was employed as a geologist for an American company, visited their aunt, Mrs. Nettie Travis, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Crane and son left Wallkill this week for a two-week's vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Wilson at Warwick.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burrell, of Cranford, N. J., visited Mrs. Nettie Travis recently.

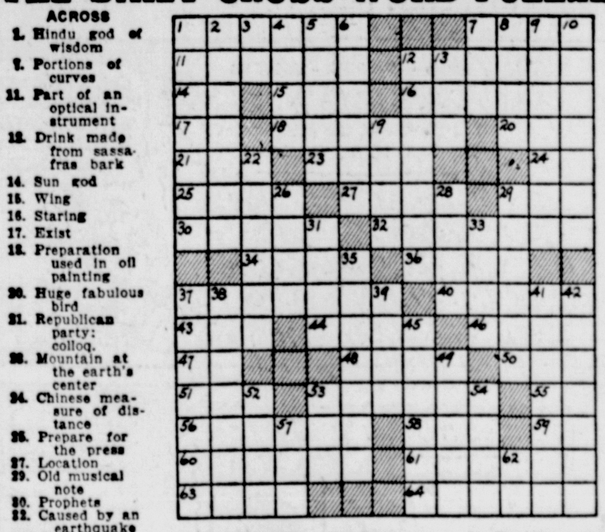

About 40 members of the Wallkill Reformed Church choir and consistory and families enjoyed a picnic supper on the parsonage lawn Thursday evening. A farewell gift was presented J. Harry Kelso, who leaves as organist on August 1, after 19 years of loyal service to the church and community. Mr. Kelso has accepted the position as organist of the Walden Methodist church. Mrs. Mrs. Kelso was also presented with a basket of flowers. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Macey Van Wagenen, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Crowell, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. So, Music Hath Charm?

American Flag Never on Stamps

Washington, Aug. 1 (AP)—The post office department—which has featured everything on its stamps from a cow to Whistler's mother—admitted today that it was stuck with a problem involving philatelists and the flag.

In the midst of the current wave of patriotism, H. E. Rhoads of San Diego, Calif., wrote to Postmaster General Farley that no American flag has ever waved on an American stamp.

Intensive investigation disclosed that Rhoads was substantially correct—a few flags have appeared insignificantly since 1869, but never has one been featured.

Rhoads, who is president of the San Diego Stamp Club, submitted a design for a new air mail stamp—the unfurled flag in color.

Continuing his campaign, he wrote his congressman, Rep. Ed V. Izac, and the congressman wrote the postmaster general. Other philatelists wrote in and praised the idea.

Then came the poser that led to the present problem.

Someone pointed out that the flag is a patriotic symbol and that as the centerpiece of a postage stamp it would take a national licking. Holes would be punched in it by cancelling machines; it would be spotted with ink and the names of cities; dirty hands would dull its brightness.

As the adornment of an old envelope could it be tossed into the waste basket or would all the old envelopes bearing flag stamps have to be preserved?

The thought was frightening. The department is not committing itself either way for the present.

Glider Training Plan To Help Make Aviators

At the 11th annual national soaring contest held at Elmira, N. Y., the Civil Aeronautics Board was presented with a plan to include preliminary glider training for power plane students similar to the plan which built Germany's air force personnel reserve to 400,000 pilots.

To further substantiate this plan and to allow prospective students interested in gliding a chance to fulfill their desire to fly the Elmira Area Soaring Corporation is inaugurating three two-week periods of instruction. The courses would be offered August 12 to 25, September 9 to 22, and September 23 to October 6.

The course would lead to the obtaining of a Civil Aeronautics private or commercial pilot's license or, in other words, upon completion of the course the student is eligible to become an instructor.

Three different periods were chosen to enable college students on vacation to learn flying before returning to college; also, to split the expected registration into smaller groups, making for greater mobility and ease of training.

Living quarters and the base of operations will be at Harris Hill, Elmira, N. Y. These facilities were donated for the purpose of gliding by the Chemung County Board of Supervisors.

Revenues from motor vehicle registrations and gasoline taxes in Canada in 1939 totalled $79,915,492, of which $27,961,132 was from registrations and $51,954,360 from gasoline taxes. In 1938 the total for registrations was $26,230,196 and the gasoline taxes $41,247,688, making a total revenue of $67,477,884.

Casual Slaughters

By VIRGINIA HANSON

YESTERDAY. The interview with Jeff is unsatisfactory. Kay decides to tell the Colonel about seeing Sandra and Ivan on the barge. Although it makes Jeff's case blacker she believes it better to examine all the evidence.

Chapter 33

Conviction of Guilt

"THAT'S important," he said gravely when I had finished. "You see what it means, don't you? That Ivan was probably killed before the rest of you left the beach—during the time when everyone was scattered. As I understand it, the men all went off alone—first Adam, then Gerald or the chaplain, and finally Jeff. You three girls were together, which gives you an alibi—not that anyone would seriously consider that one of you would have killed Ivan——"

"Sandra could have killed him before she left the barge," I pointed out. But it was a purely academic observation. Sandra herself had been murdered. . .

"Of course there is the possibility which someone has suggested," he went on, "that Ivan deliberately remained at the beach to keep an appointment——"

"I was coming to that," I said miserably. I had committed myself to telling him the whole truth, but I knew that what was coming was pure dynamite. "There was that car——"

"Can you place the time you heard the car?" he asked, unconsciously granting me a reprieve.

"It was soon after eleven. I heard taps as we were driving back out there for our swim."

He asked me to describe again just what we had heard and seen. I told of the arrival of the car, the sound of a single door slamming, the dim sight of someone moving on the barge, the brief wait, then the car door again and the repeated whine of the starter.

"And while we were dressing Julia told me—— Colonel Pennant, I hope you won't think I'm just trying to make trouble. But I said I was going to tell you everything. And Julia can deny it now all she likes. I'm positive she told me it was Mimi's car; that they had been having trouble starting it."

His eyebrows lifted, but he did not snub me as I had been afraid he would do. Instead, he got to his feet and went over to the door where he pressed an old-fashioned bell push that I could hear ring in the kitchen regions.

"We'll ask Mimi if she knows anything about it," he said easily.

Cora came to the door presently, and he asked her to see if Mrs. Pennant was in her room and if she was to ask her to come down.

"Now about Sandra being killed in your room——" he began.

I told him then, reserving nothing, of Sandra's admission to me that she was afraid of Jeff, of the bruise she had shown me, and of the fact that she had shared my room since their marriage.

By the time I was through I was frightened by the weight of the case I had made out against Jeff. I had not thoroughly comprehended it myself until I put it into words. And when I went back and told of the encounter at Fieldstone Inn, and Sandra's parent conviction that Jeff had seen her with Ivan on the barge, and her blunt reminder of the time Jeff had knocked Ivan down—I looked at Colonel Pennant then and saw with a sick sense of remorse what had been unwelcome suspicion on his part was now a conviction of Jeff's guilt.

Well, maybe he was guilty. Julia might never believe it, might never forgive me for what I had just done. But if he was innocent something would—something must come to light to prove it. And if he was guilty there was no use in withholding damning evidence.

Craven Of Me

MIMI came in then, looking rather drawn and tired in spite of the fact that she had obviously been asleep. She had on a fresh frock and her hair was neat, but her face was flushed like a baby's when it first wakes up, and her eyelids looked heavy.

Colonel Pennant repeated to her what I had said about the car, and she sat down rather abruptly.

"It's only fair to tell you," I put in hastily, "that Julia doesn't remember saying any such thing It's possible that she merely said she'd been having trouble starting your car recently——"

No doubt it was craven of me, but I would have given a lot to back out of this particular situation.

"Julia ought to know the sound of my car," Mimi said with mechanical courtesy. "And I'm sure she must have said it if you think so, Kay. But I certainly did not go back out to the beach that night, or any other night. I would have been afraid to, after the things that have been happening around here."

"Suppose you tell us just what you did after we left the beach," Colonel Pennant put in pleasantly.

"Well, I followed you until we got back to the quadrangle. Then you drove out of the post, remember, to that boy scout meeting, or whatever it was you had that night. Mrs. Bridewell wanted to be dropped at the club, and when I had let her off there I took a little drive for about an hour, then went home and to bed."

"Where did you drive?" asked her husband, and I'm afraid we both saw the flush that rose in her cheeks and the trapped look in her eyes.

"Oh—just around," she said with a rather pitiful attempt to sound casual. "I believe I drove down the highway as far as Fieldstone Inn—just ambling along, getting the breeze. I didn't stop anywhere."

"And you came home at what time?"

"Nine, or nine-thirty. I didn't notice exactly, but it was after dark."

"Then you were home when Sandra got here?"

"Yes. I had gone to bed. I heard the car stop and someone come in. Then presently, because I didn't hear any voices, I went out in the hall and called down to see who it was. Sandra answered and said she was alone. She thought the others had probably gone on to the club, but she had a headache so she was just going to read for a few minutes and then go to bed. I went back in my room and went to sleep. And that was all I knew until a couple of hours later when they came here after you, Dan."

"You put the car in the garage when you came home?"

"Yes. Of course you know I never lock it—everything is so safe here," she said with unconscious irony. "I suppose someone could have taken it out again. I don't sleep on that side of the house. I probably wouldn't have heard anything."

Colonel Pennant rose.

"All right, girls. Thanks for helping. Now I think I'll see Julia. Will one of you ask her to step down here?"

I followed Mimi upstairs and took refuge in the bathroom, so that she would be the one to deliver the message. I waited until I heard Julia go down, then I went to my room and found Mimi waiting for me there.

'She Was Bad'

"IF YOU want to work, or sleep or anything just say so and I'll go away," she said nervously.

"Not at all—I didn't bring any work, and I slept for an hour this morning. I'm glad you came in. I—I want to thank you for taking it the way you did—what I said. It's not that I'm trying to implicate anyone in this thing. I feel rather unnecessary here, especially with Adam gone. Perhaps I would do better to keep out of it entirely."

"No, no, Kay. Don't feel that way. You're quite right to tell anything you know, and I'm sure we're all very glad you're here. I don't resent your telling about the car. Why should I?"

"That isn't all I told," I said miserably. "I'm afraid Julia will never forgive me. But I got into this thing. Sandra was with me so much during the last few days——"

I needed to justify myself. Somehow I felt that I had put a noose around Jeff's neck. I wanted someone to reassure me. I was ready to pour out the whole thing; but before I could go on Mimi burst into sudden, passionate speech.

"I'm glad she's dead! I don't want to know who killed her—I don't care." Her cheeks were scarlet, her eyes blazing. "You needn't look at me like that, Kay. I'm not insane. And I don't care what you think of me. It's true and I have to say it. I'm glad she's dead. You didn't know her the way I did. She was bad, Kay. Bad through and through!"

I stared at her in horrified silence. Mimi, the self-contained, the soft spoken. She had seemed fond of Sandra, I thought wildly. Or had she? I began to remember little things. . . .

"How I wish I had never seen her!" she cried distractedly. "Kay—I don't know what there is about you, but I feel I can trust you. And if I don't tell someone I think I'll go mad with it——"

With a real effort I interrupted her there.

"No!" I told her. "You mustn't trust me. You don't know what I've just done to Julia—and Jeff."

She looked at me strangely for a moment.

"But you don't know what I have done to Julia and Jeff," she said more quietly. "It's all my fault, the whole thing. I suppose you mean they're in love with one another. I've tried not to know it. I've told myself that Jeff really loved Sandra, and that Julia was just a child, that she would outgrow him. But I've always known, in spite of myself."

She paused, her eyes desperately searching my face.

"I'm going to tell you anyway," she said at last. "I've lived with it so long, and there's been no one I could talk to. I won't ask you to keep what I say confidential. I'll trust you. Only—only just let me talk to you."

She sounded terribly shaken. I nodded. It would have taken more resolution than I had to refuse to listen.

A wise man is like a straight pin; his head keeps him from going too far.

This is doubtless true of many in times of great danger:

Mose was in the war. At every explosion he strove for the rear line. His colonel talked to him thus:

Colonel — You shouldn't be afraid, Mose. Why, what if you do die? Heaven is your home!

Mose—Yassuh, Ah knows. But Ah ain't homesick!

Lines to a Friend

You gave me courage through each weary day,
You smoothed the paths in which my feet have trod;
And gave me hope and love and peace along life's way,
And, when I needed faith, you showed me God.

The bride of a few weeks noticed that her husband was depressed:

Bride—Ernest, dearest, I know there is something troubling you, and I want you to tell me what it is; your worries are not your worries now—they are our worries.

Groom—Very well, then, we've just had a letter from a girl, and she's suing us for breach of promise.

The mighty engines of the ocean liner throbbed ceaselessly. The chief engineer wiped a perspiring forehead and scowled at the young man with the oil can.

Engineer (growling) — Look here, you aren't helping me much with these engines, yet you said you knew something about this business.

Young Man—So I do, but on a smaller scale, you know.

Engineer—Well, what was your former job?

Young Man—Watch repairing.

The great lure of the old days lies in the fact that as we recall them, we conveniently forget their sad, bitter and unpleasant features and recall only the little that we can remember happily. But they were in truth nothing like so happy as we thus make ourselves believe.

Bessie—No. Mr. Smartboy, I'm not ready to marry.

Billie—Will you let me know when you are?

Bessie—Yes, I'll send you a wedding announcement.

The farmer is more concerned about his corn than he is about his government. And the government is more concerned about the farmer's coin than for the former.

Visiting Scotchman (plucking at the sleeve of the zoo attendant)—Hoot Mon! Can you tell me what yon animal might be?

Guide—That is a North American moose.

Scotchman—Goodness! What a wonderful continent this is! I'd not like to meet with a North American rat.

Tammas—What do they mean by "a dear friend," Sandy?

Sandy—I don't know, but the dearest friends I ever had was a man that was married three times. He cost me two funeral wreaths and three wedding presents in six years.

Lucky Bride

How lucky is the modern bride!
Though cooking may be strange
She can still serve an epic feast

Hans—Well, what are you kicking about? Ain't you got the leetle feesh?

New Japanese State Is Planned By Government

Will Be Based on Sweeping Totalitarian at Home and Dedicated to Independent Foreign Policy

Tokyo, Aug. 1 (AP)—The government of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye announced today a plan for a brand new Japanese state, based on a sweeping totalitarianism at home and dedicated to an independent foreign policy which would extend Japan's domination southward over French Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies.

In a statement of policy the government outlined a strongly centralized and unified state designed for creation of "a new order for greater East Asia," with the Yen bloc—Japan and her continental satellites whose currencies are based on the yen—as the foundation.

The statement failed to take Japan any closer to the Rome-Berlin axis despite the totalitarianism at home. It pulled Japan away from the other western powers, however, and called for an extensive rearmament program.

Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka said in an interview that Japan has discarded the policy of trying to win the friendship of "recalcitrant nations." As for the European war, he said Japan for the present would maintain a policy of non-involvement.

"We strive to make whatever friends we can under the prevailing environment," he said, "but henceforth we will not make a vain effort to grasp the hands of those countries which cannot be turned into friends. The government is through with Toadyism."

The government's statement coined the phrase "Greater East Asia" in naming the sphere Japan aims to dominate—previously it had been simply "East Asia," meaning Japan, Manchoukuo and the occupied sections of China.

Of this Matuoka said:

"Needless to say, the term 'Greater East Asia' includes the South Seas. The final aim is establishment of a stabilizing force for a self-sufficiency embracing not only Japan, Manchoukuo and China, but also Indo-China and the East Indies."

He said Japan would try to fulfill her mission "in concert with those friendly powers which are prepared to cooperate with us."

Plan of New State

This is the plan of the new state, first envisaged in general terms with formation of the Konoye government on July 18:

Politics: Establishment of a new political structure based on service to the state by all persons, regardless of status; renovation of the Diet (parliament) as an organ for assisting the throne; renovation of administrative machinery and reformation of bureaucracy toward a greater unit of efficiency.

Economy: Establishment of "a sphere of economies with Japan, Manchoukuo and the China group one of the units; "renovation of the foreign trade policy to conform to the new world situation (apparently strengthening barter agreements); "inauguration of a planned economy through cooperation of the government and the people, and especially perfection of a unitary control system covering production, distribution and consumption of important commodities."

Establishment of a financial scheme reinforcing banking control toward development of the nation's total economic power; expansion of vital industries, especially the chemical, machine and heavy industries; promotion of science and the "rationalization" of production.

Education: A thorough renovation stressing "service to the state" and "eradication of all selfish and materialistic thoughts."

While the statement did not mention it, creation of a single party was believed to be a fundamental part of the plan of the new state.

They're Connoisseurs

Boulder, Colo. (AP) — Thieves who have broken into the same liquor store three times are discriminating. The proprietor reported that each time they stole only one brand of whiskey and molested no other brands. It was the costliest kind in the store.

This is an invitation to tune in on the new radio broadcasts, "Making America Strong." The broadcasts are going out over local stations in all parts of the country and deal especially with urgent and vital questions of adequate national defense.

A Social Asset To Play A Good Game of Golf

Know Right Way to Swing

If your attempts at golf have been feeble and discouraging how marvelous the club champion seems as, with a mighty swing, she drives the ball 200 yards down the fairway.

Yet she probably once did as badly as you and she may have no more strength or ability. But with the right instructions she has learned how to use her strength.

Golf is such fun, wins so many social rewards when you play well. Test your swing. Do you feel cramped, make a conscious effort to lift your club, turn your body? Then you're not really swinging, you're wasting your strength.

For a powerful accurate stroke swing the club in a smooth arc, allowing the body to respond to the outward pull of the club, but making no forced effort to pivot.

A good trick to get the feel of a real swing is to take a string with a weight attached to one end and swing this in a gradually increasing arc. Now take up your club, swing in the same way.

Your golf improves rapidly when you understand the principles. In our 32-page booklet Ernest Jones, teacher of champions, tells how to hold the club, how to stand and swing with the maximum of power and efficiency. For beginners and more advanced golfers.

Send 10 cents in coin for your copy of SWING'S THE THING IN GOLF to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service 635 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of boklet.

Beaver is handled like fabric in a fitted coat with nipped-in waist and tiny tuxedo revers. Such treatment is possible because the fur is processed in a new way to make it lighter, more pliable. The muff and hat in the same fur increase the costume's smartness. From Gunther's.

State Fair Will Not Be Open to Political Forums

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 1 (AP)—Political candidates must omit speeches at this year's New York State Fair.

State Agriculture Commissioner Holton V. Noyes announced the ban last night after conferring with Fair Director Paul Smith. He denied it was aimed at Republican Presidential Candidate Wendell L. Willkie, whom friends had suggested as a fair speaker.

"The state fair," Noyes added, "is not open to political forums. . . . if we permit one, we would have to let in candidates of all political organizations. It is just a question of whether we want to open the fair to politics."

HALF-GROWN CHILDREN NOT INVITED WHEN ASKING THEIR PARENTS TO BE DINNER GUESTS

That Is if It's a Real Dinner Party, Emily Post Explains, and There Are Other Guests

According to etiquette, children—not even those who are half-grown—are ever included at dinner parties. Therefore, in answering whether "it is necessary to invite half-grown children when asking their parents to dinner," the obvious answer is "No".

On the other hand, the definition of a dinner party may mean one thing to some of us, and something else to another. In other words, if you are merely inviting intimate friends to take dinner with you alone, and you know that there is no one at home to look after two very young girls, you would perhaps feel it necessary to include them. But if you are asking the Smiths, Joneses, and the Robinsons to dine with you at such and such an evening, boys and girls who are still young enough to be called children would be out of place.

A Fraternity House-Mother

Dear Mrs. Post: I should like very much to apply for a position as house-mother in a man's fraternity, and wish that you would include what information you can about such a position in your column.

Answer: There is hardly a week goes by that my mail does not include one letter asking this question. As I have said before, such duties vary somewhat, but in general outline a house-mother as perhaps expects to act as housekeeper, and to look after the young men as well as she can without fussing or intruding upon them. She always becomes a chaperon when they have young women visitors in the house. On such occasions, she is responsive when called upon, and tactfully self-effacing when not, but she also assumes certain responsibilities and can be firm should it be necessary.

Table Service Without a Maid

Dear Mrs. Post: If the serving dishes are put on the dining table and the carving and serving is done by the host at the end of this course, which plates are removed first?

Answer: The individual plates should be taken away first, because by this time they are usually most unattractive. Then the meat platter is taken off because meat and gravy are not very appetizing after they are cold and congealed, and then the vegetable dishes. The bread, nuts, celery and olives are removed last.

Using New Candles

Dear Mrs. Post: Are new candles supposed to be burned off before they are used on a dining table?

Answer: It is usually a better idea to light them ahead of time so they will be sure to light quickly and burn evenly. There is no reason other than this one of common sense.

A large crowd came early to last night's community night to see the softball game in which the Hutton girls defeated the Hutton boys. In the marshmallow contest Margaret Barnes was the winner. Those taking part in the amateur hour were: Jacqueline Steuding, Raymond Schuler, Gertrude Witt, Virginia Eckert, Rose Hart, Anna Barnes, Betty Ann Ritch and Janet Tubby. The honors went to Gertrude Witt, who sang "To You Sweetheart, Aloha," "Don't Cry Sally" and who did some acrobatic stunts. Following the amateur program Virginia Esckert conducted a forfeit hour.

The Director

ROBERT ELWYN
(Sanderford Roome Sketch)

By MARGUERITE HURTER

Woodstock, Aug. 1.—Wednesday night:

Backstage at the Woodstock Playhouse things were humming for dress rehearsal. All the actors were pacing in their dressing rooms mumbling lines or putting on last minute dabs of make-up.

The play is "Fresh Fields," a drawing room comedy with fine opportunity for Kitty Kelly to wear handsome gowns in the role of Lady Mary. Kitty did the part in a rich voice carrying conviction and charm to the utmost value of the lines. Some seasons ago Margaret Anglin essayed this role with great success on Broadway. Kitty Kelly employs no less art in characterizing this interesting London lady who is obliged to take in paying guests to finesse a financial crisis.

Elizabeth Malloch played Lady Lillian with crisp elegance, snubbing the noveau riche guests who are constantly tripping over tables and smashing statuary. We like Betty Malloch's quick manner. She can act like a streak of lightning if given a chance. (Remember she played the secretary in "See My Lawyer.)

Charlotte Fitch as Una Pidgeon, the ingenue, who is so gauche as to smash up most of the bric-a-brac, plays the little girl from Australia in cute cockney. Constance Clark as Mrs. Pidgeon, is priceless. Arthur Gould-Porter does Uncle Tom, the wealthy cattle man from Australia, who plays golf in the drawing room and does some more smashing.

Peter Adams as the butler, and Aileen Cramer as the secretary carried the comedy with superb ease. That Cramer girl is versatile and gets better all the time.

Bruce Winne, that good looking Kingston lad, does the jaunty juvenile "Tim," who is the son of Lady Mary.

Donna Earle as another scheming noblewoman, adds to the brightness of the comedy. Donna is as slender as a reed, and wears clothes that count.

The set was elaborate, and all the credit for scenic effects cannot be exaggerated in complimenting Robert Elwyn and his technicians.

Bob directs from way back in the theatre and unless there is something frightfully wrong there is little evidence of his artistic temperament tearing things to pieces. We observe, instead, a calm, quiet direction that puts things right with almost magic ease, and when the actors trip over chairs or bump into tables, he has a way of clearing the tangle in a few well whispered words. We must confess he said "damn" once or twice and Kitty Kelly muttered "hell" when she tried to carry a chair that was too heavy, but after a few huddles the whole business proceeded peacefully.

We were so crazy about the color scheme of the room we almost wanted to wrap up all the furniture and take it home. The walls were a rich rose. The trim a beautiful cobalt blue (we think it was cobalt, but the lights may have fooled us. Maybe it was aquamarine). The furniture was white with yellow upholstery. Everything was brilliantly beautiful. Just the sort of drawing room for a pink tea.

Opening night, Thursday, Gloria Vanderbuilt and Lady Furness are expected to be present. (They are particular friends of Kitty Kelly.) We notice that they have settled in their new house up here, and imagine how thrilled we were the other morning to meet them in Happy's grocery store! The young son of Lady Furness was picking out cookies or something.

Jane Kennedy has invited all of the cast of the Elwyn players to the reception at the Woodstock Art Gallery to be held Friday night. They will come in after the show. Jane says the affair at the gallery will last until maybe 2 p. m. It will be in the way of a special party, presenting the third exhibition of the season, under the direction this time of Joseph Pollet. This will be a member and non-member show and will run through August 14.

Speaking of artists we were amused at the Seahorse to hear Beulah Berson inquire "Where are all the artists in Woodstock? I just arrived today and I wandered about the village looking for famous faces."

We promised Beulah to show her around some of the studios. The famous faces she is seeking are tucked away here and there in the mountains. The best artists are seldom seen in the village except to get their mail or groceries.

Beulah sings at the Seahorse. She has a fine voice and understudied Grace Moore in the second "Music Box." She has also appeared at the Waldorf-Astoria.

There is a great variety of entertainment in Woodstock, but our favorite entertainment, at the moment, is the pair of parrots at Sheriff's Maverick Inn on the Maverick road. These parrots dance when you sing and clap your hands, and keep calling "Audrey." (Audrey is Sheriff's young daughter. Little Audrey in the flesh!) The children love the parrots. One is named Laura and the other Lauretta. Arlene Sheriff tells us that Mrs. Sheriff's brother brought the birds from Panama.

All the children of Woodstock are anticipating the Walt Disney festival Monday and Tuesday, August 5 and 6, at the Woodstock Playhouse. There will be "Snow White," "Ugly Duckling," "Practical Pigs," "Donald Duck" and that famous favorite, "Ferdinand the Bull."

We have been entertaining Geraldine Garrick, that amazing radio director who is staging "Sheep and Goats," heard Wednesdays at 8 p. m. This is a colored show that has attracted so many fans.

We were consulting Miss Garrick about some colored actors for our Father Divine comedy to be staged at the Woodstock Playhouse on August 29. Don't miss it. If it's not a hit we'll just hide back of the barn and never write another line. We think it will be fun. It's full of laughs, and if it isn't—well, the laugh will be on us!

Cleon Throckmorton may come up to do the sets.

"Throc" is a wizard. He did "Porgy and Bess" and other Theatre Guild productions. (By the way the Theatre Guild held our play eight months, and then said "April Fool!") That's what you get for writing a play. If we get this play over we hope we never write anything again—except checks.

Men's Club to Meet

Members of the Men's Club of the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church will meet this evening at Epworth Hall promptly at 8 o'clock where cars will be provided to convey them to the home of Arthur S. Fatum, deceased member of the club, where the membership will pay its respects to deceased.

Farm population now is the largest in 24 years, the Department of Agriculture notes. It is close to the all-time high of 1916, which was 32,530,000. In the nineteen thirties net migration from the farms was slightly more than two million persons, as against approximately six million in the twenties. The difference is traced to the depression beginning in 1929.

Three Traffic Arrests Yesterday

Wednesday afternoon the police arrested three automobilists for traffic violations. Silas Kimbark of 86 Fairview avenue, charged with failing to observe a full stop sign, forfeited $2 cash bail today in police court when he failed to appear to answer to the charge. Anthony Quarantino of East Kingston forfeited $2 bail. He was charged with overtime parking uptown. Lawrence Ellis of East Kingston pleaded guilty to failing to observe a full stop sign and was fined $2.

John Truesdell, 20, of Malden, a member of a CCC camp, was arrested early today on Broadway on a charge of public intoxication. Judge Cahill gave him the opportunity of returning to camp.

Didn't Like A.F.L. Agent, Sea Food Workers Quit

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—The United Sea Food Workers' Union no longer is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, because it re-employed as business agent a man convicted of anti-trust law violation.

The order to revoke the union's charter came from A. F. L. President William Green, who asserted the union had disobeyed orders in rehiring Joseph (Socks) Lanza, oft-described "czar of the fish market racketeers," who spent two years in the federal penitentiary.

The union is under the direct supervision of the A. F. L. and thus is unlike big national and international unions whose charters may be revoked only by an A. F. L. convention.

Lanza, 40, was convicted in 1935 with 81 others, on charges of hiring gangsters to enforce an interstate monopoly of an industry which grossed more than $5,000,000 annually.

Lanza's only comment yesterday was:

"The union belongs to the men, and they wanted me back. I was elected last February at a regular election."

Income payments to individuals in the United States during the first five months of 1940 totalled $29,132,000,000, a five per cent increase over the same period in 1939, according to the Department of Commerce. Employes received a total of $18,655,000,000 in the period, a step-up of slightly less than one billion dollars over 1939.

Migrant Workers Placed In Distinctive Groups

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—A congressional committee investigating migration of destitute citizens placed in three classifications today the types of wandering jobseekers most common in the United States.

Representative Tolan (D.-Calif.), committee chairman, said these were the seasonal agricultural migrant; the migrant from Puerto Rico who comes to New York, and the southern negro.

"There are additional special groups, including seamen and variety artists, while stranded populations of miners and garment workers in towns in which mines have shut down or factories moved away constitute a large group of potential migrants, particularly in Pennsylvania and New England," Tolan said.

The committee wound up its New York hearings yesterday and prepared to move on for other hearings later in the month at Montgomery, Ala., and the west.

One witness, Caroline O'Day, New York state representative-at-large and a Democrat, asserted "sweatshops for children" had shifted from factories to farms because of the employment in agriculture of the children of migrants.

Additional Funds for Auto Workers' Big Fight

St. Louis, Aug. 1 (AP)—The United Automobile Workers today had assurances of a fatter bank account with which to push its organizational drive on the Ford Motor Company, the aircraft and farm implement industries.

On suggestion of C.I.O. Chief John L. Lewis, the U.W.A. convention yesterday voted to raise additional funds by an increased monthly per capita tax paid by each local. Dues to the national office were hiked from 37½ to 40 cents, although the $1 per month membership fees were not altered.

After two proposals of assessments for the organization work were defeated, delegates voted to hold a referendum, to be completed October 1, on a $1 assessment designed to raise about $200,000 for the move on Ford and others.

Believe Abandoned Car Used by Krakower Slayers

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—An abandoned car bearing New Jersey licenses, believed by police to be the one used by gunmen who shot and killed a 35-year-old painter last night, was found today a few blocks from the scene of the lower east side slaying.

Two revolvers, both of which had been fired, were found in the auto.

The victim was Benjamin Krakower, described by police as a "boss painter" recently returned from California. He was shot to death as he sat near a tavern entrance at Willet and Delancey streets.

Police expressed belief he had been assassinated for attempting to infringe on the territory of an established gang.

People can starve to death even when they eat too much food, if some element necessary to life is lacking in the food, food experts say.

Slayer Ready for Anything

Ossining, N. Y., Aug. 1 (AP).—Norman Wheelock, sex slayer of a 13-year-old school girl, said he was "ready for anything" as he prepared for death in Sing Sing's electric chair tonight. The 27-year-old Prattsburg telephone lineman was convicted of murder in an attack several months ago on Evelyn Reed of Yates county. Although Wheelock's counsel has sought executive clemency on grounds the youth was deranged, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman has given no indication he would intervene. "I don't like the outlook," Wheelock said, "but I'm ready for anything." He has been in the death house since November 11.

It's Tough Enough

Cleveland, O. (AP) — Howard Chin gave Harry Karr, a lawyer, a double problem when he asked Karr to solve his income tax arithmetic. Karr wanted more information to work on. He got it promptly—in Chinese characters.

If commercially canned tomato juice has had water added, this fact must appear on the label in a plain manner, according to the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Bonds have been moving up in the public debt, until they have reached about seventy-two percent of the interest-bearing debt. In 1935 they were down to fifty-four percent. "Special issues" of Treasury obligations used to make available for Treasury spending the increasing collections from federal and state payroll taxes over requirements for benefit payments have risen to eleven percent of the debt.

Little Activity in Market Wednesday

Electric Output During the Past Week Set a New High for This Year

Yesterday's market failed to carry through the improvement of the preceding session and the volume was 560,000 shares. While industrial average was up 0.17 to 126.14 by Dow-Jones, rails eased off 0.17 to 26.92 and utilities went off 0.05 to 22.70. Commodities opened at the day high and steadily eased off 0.19 to 51.07 in the Dow-Jones futures index. Bond market was generally firm.

The federal government's plan to spend $500,000,000 for construction of new munitions plants to be operated by private industry was disclosed in Washington and airplane manufacturers are asked to accept contracts on a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee basis, with privilege to rewrite contracts after excess profits and amortization problems are settled. This was a plan offered to speed up production of warplanes.

Electric output in the past week was a new high for the year and the third highest on record. Custom smelter's copper was up an eighth of a cent and prospects of further advance. Cotton textiles, at low ebb for weeks, took a spurt.

Again corporate news was favorable. Westinghouse Electric reported net of $3.68 on common during first half, vs. $2.37 and ordered $1 common and preferred dividends, vs. 87½ cents previously. Record orders for the 12 months June 30 period were reported by the company. U. S. Pipe first half net is estimated at more than $1 common share, vs. $2.06. American Locomotive received a $1,427,296 Army ordnance order. Earlier predictions that American Woolens would have a sizable net loss for the period now seem in error and first half operations are indicated to be in the black, vs. net profit of $358,000.

Among the earnings reported was Standard Brands with 17 cents per common share, vs. 12 cents in 1939 for period. Commercial Solvents reported 20 cents common, vs. nine cents in 1939. Pure Oil shows 69 cents, vs. 12 cents last year. Union Oil of California reports 27 cents, vs. 34 cents in 1939 like period.

Arriving the night before the big event, he was driving around seeing the sights when he became aware that a police car was following him. Surprised that the cop made no effort to draw alongside, Ezra kept on driving his car and trailer around town, dawdling near estates to admire the gardens and finally pulling into the parking lot adjoining his hotel. The officer drove right in after him and asked what he was doing there and if he thought he was being funny. Ezra's reply was, "No, I just thought you wanted to be friends and were bashful."

"I dunno whether you know it but you've been driving all over town with no rear lights," replied the cop, "and if I hadn't recognized you, you'd be appearing before a judge tomorrow instead of being a judge yourself."

Blitzkrieg: A friend having decided to submit a question to one of those quiz programs, did a lot of diligent checking and found that since the end of the World war—the "war to end all wars"—back in 1918, there had been 22 more wars. Carefully annotating each, she sent the question and the answer to the program. Hardly had she done so than she had to send along an addition, the invasion of Norway. Then came Belgium, Luxemburg and Holland. Now she is most earnestly hoping that her question will be used soon so that she can dismiss the whole matter from her mind.

Economy: Fred Lowery, whistler in Horace Heidt's band, on a recent coast-to-coast tour was stopped several times at the stage door by women who wanted him to come to their homes and teach their canaries to whistle. But the topper, he thinks, came in a small town where he had gone to visit a friend. The chief of police wanted to know if he would teach his traffic officers to whistle without using a policeman's whistle.

"They're always losing the whistles the city buys 'em," explained the chief, "and that runs into quite an expense."

End Piece: A young lady of 10 was ordered to mind her younger brother, a lad of nine months. Being interested in a new book, sister decided that she must find a way of keeping brother quiet and amused. So, before settling herself in the hammock, she smeared each of baby's fingertips with molasses and gave him a nice feather. For more than an hour, not one cry for attention interrupted the bookworm. But it was different when her mother arrived.

CHICAGO.—Max Richard Fuder, 21 years old, of St. Louis, showed up at the army recruiting office today carrying roller skates. "I roller skated some 300 miles from St. Louis to join up," he told Sergt. John Patterson. He passed the physical examination and was put on the enlistment waiting list.

France Will Not Resign

Vichy, France, Aug. 1 (AP)—France will not resign from the League of Nations, although its attitude toward the league is one of "indifference" a French foreign office spokesman said today. "We recognize the value of certain of its technical services," he said. "For this reason France will not resign from the international body."

Cruiser Damaged

Rio De Janeiro, Aug. 1 (AP)—The heavily gunned British armed merchant cruiser Alcantara, damaged in a running sea fight with a German raider in the South Atlantic, steamed slowly into the harbor here at mid-morning. It was reported that the 22,209-ton Alcantara would dock at shipyards on the island of Vianna for repairs.

E. J. Flynn Accepts Chairmanship of Democratic Party

Washington, Aug. 1 (AP)—Edward J. Flynn of New York accepted today the chairmanship of the Democratic national committee effective August 17.

Flynn's appointment to succeed James A. Farley as head of the committee to direct the party campaign, was made at a conference at the White House.

Flynn is well known for his local political activity in New York and has been a frequent consultant of President Roosevelt.

Farley, who will retire from the chairmanship of the national committee on August 17, to operate the New York Yankee baseball system, announced Flynn's selection.

Others who had been mentioned included Frank C. Walker, New York business man and lawyer, Paul McNutt, federal security administrator, and Senator Byrnes (D.-S. C.).

Wasps Blamed for Bald Mountains in Carolina

The map of North Carolina is dotted with so-called bald mountains ranging from 2,600 to 6,000 feet in height. Many theories have been advanced to explain the lack of trees on the tops of some of these mountains. The one most generally accepted is that the soil on the mountain tops is lacking in some of the elements necessary to the growth of timber. Another notion has been that, in the past, the Indians used to clear or burn off these prominences on which nature eventually gave up trying to grow anything except grass or scrubby bushes.

Recently, however, Dr. W. A. Gates of the Louisiana State university came out with a brand-new explanation of North Carolina's bald mountains. Dr. Gates says that wasps are to blame and that the insects do much the same thing to the mountain tops as Delilah did to Samson.

Not long ago the doctor had a chance to study two North Carolina mountains—Wine Sap Bald and Wayah Bald—while they were in the process of "getting a shave." Around the edge of the area that was being denuded the scientist discovered a countless army of wasps.

This particular wasp lays its eggs only at certain altitudes and mainly on the twigs of oak trees. The bugs, popularly known as the twig gall wasps, can make short work of a grove of oak trees covering hundreds of acres.

Fortunately for the wasps, the citizens of North Carolina are not entirely displeased with the "shaves" that they give certain mountain tops. When the timber is gone the areas give the effect of being lawns high above the surrounding valleys, and many of these lawns are bright with a variety of wild flowers. A "bald mountain" also provides fine points of vantage for viewing the surrounding country.

Montana Leads Nation With Albino Buffaloes

Out of slightly more than 5,000 albino buffaloes in the United States and Alaska, the state of Montana leads the nation with 1,044 of the shaggy beasts, according to recent census figures.

More than 900 are divided between the National Buffalo range at Moiese and the Crown Indian reservation in south central Montana. The rest are scattered among various ranches throughout the state.

The white buffalo, a rarity even when buffalo were as common as cattle are now, was born several years ago on the government range at Moiese.

Dr. W. T. Hornaday, internationally known biologist, tells that he "met many old buffalo hunters who had killed thousands and had seen scores of thousands of buffaloes, yet never had encountered a white one."

Another authority, E. Douglas Branch, said there was "only one white animal in the 5,000,000 or more bison of the southern herd."

Indians looked upon an albino with awe and considered it "big medicine." For a good skin they sometimes paid the price of 10 or 15 horses, according to Branch. White men also coveted the rare pelts and there is a report of a plainsman who sold one for $1,000.

Didn't Get the Jobs

Dallas, Aug. 1 (AP)—Photographers explained to impatient city hall employes that release of a film showing them at work had been delayed unavoidably. The camera had caught two persons cheating in a civil service examination. The film had to be cut to avoid embarrassing the pair. No, they didn't get the jobs.

Raids No Bother

London, Aug. 1 (AP)—British factory workers are becoming accustomed to work right through air raids, the ministry of labor said today. Officials cited the bombing of a factory "somewhere in England" in which not one minute's production was lost, although one end of the factory was hit.

Industrial Research laboratories today are an important adjunct to American production. Their number, as reported by the National Research Council, now is more than 1,500, aside from those operated independently by government agencies and educational institutions. These laboratories will be invaluable in industry's preparations for war material output.

Joseph Kostecki and Kenneth Randegger, both of Bloomington, were arrested at noon today by Motorcycle Officer George P. Bowers who charged them with driving over a fire hose on the Boulevard where the fire department was called for a fire in one of the busses of the Adirondack bus line. They will be arraigned in police court on Friday.

The big bus was discovered on fire while on the way to New York and the fire department was called. The passengers were transferred to another bus and the interrupted journey was continued.

No one at the fire department was able to furnish any information in regard to the fire.

Fruits and Tall, Cool Drinks Help Beat Summer Heat

Tasty Fruit tidbits to introduce a summer meal or accompany summer beverages

By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE
(AP) Feature Service Writer

Long cool drinks that can be made in a jiffy, but sipped at leisure top the list of family restoratives when days sizzle.

Just the sight of frosted glass and the sound of tinkling ice seem to push the mercury down.

A cooling, healthful beverage that is especially appetizing is SPICED MOCHA CHOCOLATE. Serve it with a couple of kinds of sandwiches and fruit and you have an ample summer luncheon menu. This quantity, which serves four, should be cooked slowly for 3 minutes and stirred constantly: ¼ cup cocoa, ½ cup granulated sugar, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ⅛ teaspoon each of salt and cloves and 2-3 cup water. Mix in 1 cup strong coffee and 4 cups of milk. Cook slowly until well blended, cool, add a teaspoon of vanilla and mix thoroughly. Chill and serve in tall glasses. Garnish the top with whipped cream of marshmallows.

Here is a cooler that can be made up hours ahead of time. It's FRUIT FLIP. Boil 1 cup granulated sugar in 3 cups of water for two minutes. Cool and add 1 cup orange juice, 1 cup grape juice, 2 cups pineapple juice and 2-3 cup lemon juice. Mix in 6 fresh mint leaves and pour into a jar. Cover and store in the refrigerator. When time to serve discard the mint leaves, add a cup of iced water for each cup of juice and pour into tall glasses half filled with broken ice. Garnish with fresh mint leaves and serve at once.

This pungent NECTAR CHILL is a great thirst-quencher. It is gay in color, too, and can be used for a punch bowl filler or in tall glasses. Boil ½ cup granulated sugar in a cup of water for two minutes. Cool and add 2 cups apricot nectar, 1 cup each of orange and pineapple juices and ½ cup lemon juice. Chill until needed and then pour in 4 cups of iced water and a quart of ginger ale.

If you are looking for a porch party beverage try TEA FROST. It's sparkling, cool to look upon and most refreshing. Loosely tie in a muslin bag ¼ cup bark cinnamon and 12 whole cloves, and put the bag in 4 cups of hot water to which you have added 4 tablespoons orange pekoe tea. Cover tightly and steep 5 minutes. Drain off the liquid, cool it and then add 1 cup granulated sugar, 1½ cups orange juice, 1 cup red cherry juice and ½ cup lemon juice. Chill. At serving time add 8 cups of iced water. Serve in tall glasses half filled with chopped ice. Deck out with cherries and sprigs of fresh mint.

Fruit Hors D'Oeuvre Plate

With spoon-sized chunks of Hawaiian pineapple to give it tang, this plate of fruit appetizers is a fine accompaniment for tall drinks in summer. An attractive combination of colors and flavors might include nippy cheese balls (cream and Roquefort cheese and finely chopped celery and a dash of onion juice and tabasco sauce) sprinkled with paprika arranged on geranium leaves or small greens in the center. Surround this with well-drained spoon-size chunks of pineapple rolled in chopped mint leaves, half inch slices of bananas dipped in lemon juice and rolled in chopped salted nutmeats, and strawberries sprinkled with powdered sugar. Avocado cubes dipped in lime or lemon juice make an interesting addition. Lift hors d'oeuvres from the plate with cocktail toothpicks.

Germany Entered The World War 26 Years Ago

(By The Associated Press)

Today, eleven months after German troops marched into Poland to precipitate the present war, is the 26th anniversary of German entry in the World War.

Following the assassination of the Archduke Frances Ferdinand at Sarajevo June 28, 1914, Austria on July 23, submitted a 48-hour ultimatum to Serbia. Failing to win an extension from the Austrians, British Foreign Minister Sir Edward Grey urged the Serbs to meet Austria's terms.

Serbia granted most of the demands, but Austria still was not satisfied. With war appearing inevitable, Russia announced she would mobilize on the day Austrian troops crossed the Serb frontier, and Germany threatened mobilization to match the Russian military moves.

On July 26 Sir Edward Grey proposed a conference of England, France, Germany and Italy to seek settlement of the Austrian-Russian dispute. But Germany declined the invitation; Austria disregarded the Russian threat and declared war on the Serbs on July 28; Germany sought to persuade Austria to iron out her difficulties with Russia through diplomacy and then, failing in that and finding Russia still mobilizing, on August 1 informed Russia a state of war existed between the two countries.

Stronger Bond

Moscow, Aug. 1 (AP)—Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Russia's premier-foreign commissar, told the seventh session of the Supreme Soviet today that recent events in Europe had only improved the relations between Germany and Russia.

43 Persons Victims Of Akron Wreck

from Columbus, O., telescoped the fore end of the 122,00-pound coach, and shoved it back in its wake for 200 yards. Flames spurted from the windows as its 250-gallon gasoline tanks exploded. Firemen poured water into the coach. Then they and volunteers went about the sickening two-hour task of removing bodies, many so burned that identification was difficult.

Coroner R. E. Amos, seeking to clear up the identifications, said the passengers "didn't have a chance in the world" to escape.

Regular Inferno

Eyewitnesses said flames enveloped the coach so fast that none of the passengers could escape. One man standing nearby said he heard no screams.

Officials estimated eight of the dead were railroad employes "dead-heading" home after concluding their runs. Most of the passenger victims were residents of the Akron district, although the coach, which shuttled the 12 miles from Hudson, O., to Akron, had picked up passengers at Hudson from the Pennsylvania's Cleveland-Pittsburgh line.

Two enginemen on the freight train, which had two locomotives, were burned slightly as they fled the flames after braking to a stop.

Engineer O. M. Lodge of Columbus, O., on the lead locomotive, said:

"I had the signal to go ahead at Akron station. I was going straight through when I saw the Doodlebug coming around the bend. I blew my whistle and tried to slow down. It was no use.

"When the crash came, burning gasoline was thrown up into my cab. It burned my face. I jumped back and went over the coal car to escape the flames."

It was the second big American railroad tragedy in four months. Thirty-one persons died in the wreck of the New York Central's Lake Shore Limited at Little Falls, N. Y., April 19.

By weaving their own material, some South Carolina women last year made enough cotton crash to curtain a four-room house for less than one dollar.

Store Burglary

Wednesday afternoon the police department received a report that the grocery store of C. F. Leware at Albany and Foxhall avenues had been entered during the night and seven cartons of cigarettes and about a dollar's worth of candy had been stolen. Entrance was obtained by forcing one of the windows.

Nazis Spread War From Air Along English Coastline

destroyer lost in the war, after a bombing attack.

The Italian high command said Italian fliers had sunk a British destroyer in the eastern Mediterranean July 28, but did not identify it; and also claimed the air force destroyed two British planes in a fight over Malta.

An RAF communique issued at Cairo, Egypt, said two Italian submarines had been sunk in the Mediterranean last month, and an Italian fighter plane had been shot out of a formation yesterday in an attempted raid on Malta.

Undisclosed Mission

A Madrid radio broadcast said a battle squadron of three British battleships, an aircraft carrier, four destroyers and five submarines headed into the Mediterranean from Gibraltar on an undisclosed mission.

In the air war, German raiders struck during the night in the neighborhood of the Thames estuary, shipping entrance to London, and of the Bristol Channel, west coast waterway, but the British government said damage was slight and no casualties resulted.

Radio stations at Bremen and Hamburg were reported silent, indicating British raids on Germany.

In the Far East, the Japanese admiralty spokesman in Tokyo asserted President Roosevelt's embargo on exporting aviation gasoline outside the western hemisphere "undoubtedly is designed to exert economic pressure on Japan and the Rome-Berlin axis." "If America continues on the same lines it is bound to cause repercussions," he added.

At the same time the new government of Prince Fumimaro Konoye issued a lengthy statement of policy which outlined a strongly centralized and unified state designed for creation of "a new order for greater East Asia."

he said he had not been asked to take the job.

Crowley said he would resign his federal position soon to become chairman of the board of the Standard Gas and Electric Company, of New York and Chicago.

There was some talk that efforts might be continued to persuade Farley, who conducted the Roosevelt campaigns of 1932 and 1936, to remain as chairman, at least for part of the campaign.

His friends believed, however, that he would adhere to his decision to leave the post August 17 to become president of the New York Yankees.

Maines Hits Long Homer in Fourth; Two Are 'Beaned'

Neff Pitches Victory for Kingston; Williams and Evans Pitch for the New Yorkers

The largest turnout ever to witness a ball game at municipal stadium was on hand last night when Carlie Husta's Kingston Recreations continued their winning ways by slipping a 6 to 4 defeat on the famous New York Black Yankees.

With the record crowd in the stands both teams managed to pull off a couple of feats to make the tussle stand out as the best of the campaign. For Kingston Tommy Maines hit the longest homer of the season in the fourth inning. His crash landed on top of the embankment in left and then rolled along the surface.

The Yankees had to be satisfied with five errors, very costly ones, and two unfortunate "beanings." Jesse Walker and Ray Williams were the victims. Walker was felled in the third and was rushed to the hospital. Williams was conked just above the base of the neck in the seventh and although he ran for himself, had to retire a few minutes later.

Eight Errors

These were some of the highlights of last night's action-packed game at the stadium. Both clubs fought desperately to take the game but five big errors by the New Yorkers spelled doom. Kingston committed three but these didn't hurt the local chances to any degree.

Hurling for the victorious Recs last night (their fifth in a row) was Charlie Neff. The big right-hander held the slugging Yankees to eight hits but his control was far from perfect. Charlie walked seven, fanned eight and hit two batters. Ray Williams and Evans toiled for the Yankees.

After trailing 6-0 since the fourth, the New York team rammed back in the eighth and ninth with four runs to fill up the gap. Then in the ninth with the tying runs on second and third, Charlie Neff bore down and fanned Evans to end the threat and the ball game.

Ray Williams, one of the Yankees' mainstays on the hill, had Kingston on the ropes for the first three frames and fans were predicting one of the toughest games of the season. Well, it certainly looked like that until Kingston had batted in the fourth.

Maines Hits Homer

Tommy Maines opened the session with a long lift, the ball soaring over Baker's head and hitting on top of the embankment in left for a homer. Mac Tiano skied to right but then the fireworks started. For a while the scene took on an Ebbetts Field appearance where everything usually happens—even some sloppy ball.

Jack Schatzel kept the rally sizzling by firing a single into right and when the pill rolled through Williams' legs, Jack scampered to second. Zadany singled, scoring Jack Schatzel for Kingston's second marker. Zadany went to second as Barker threw home in an attempt to catch Schatzel. The Yanks had Zadany caught flat-footed between second and third as Celuch hit back to the box but on the relay from third, Miller dropped the ball and all hands were safe.

Neff came up with a single, driving in Zadany and Celuch. Charlie raced all the way to third as Barker's toss in left skipped by Spearman at third. On Williams' wild pitch, Charlie romped in. Before Williams uncorked his wild heave, Van Derzee walked and was out going into third on the wild pitch, Hayes to Spearman. George McLean, who played a good game around second, singled, stole second and scored as Smedes doubled to right center. Maines, up for the second time, walked. But Tiano ended the inning as he went down on strikes.

New N. Y. Pitcher

After Kingston's big fourth Evans came in to pitch for the Yankees and proceeded to allow the Recs just one hit, a single by Charlie Neff in the sixth. Aside from this, Kingston was handcuffed.

The Yankees made threatening gestures in the third, fifth, sixth and seventh but failed to take advantage of the idea until the eighth when they pushed across three runs on two hits and a couple of walks. Biot slammed a bounder down the third base line and the ball hit the bag, bouncing into left for a double. After Van Derzee erred on Starks' bounder, Hayes walked, filling the sacks.

Evans also walked forcing in Biot with the Yanks' first run. Williams grounded to Van Derzee who stepped on second for one out, Starks scoring. Barker then singled, scoring Hayes with the New Yorkers' third run of the frame.

Again in the ninth the powerful New York aggregation came to life and scored a run. Van Derzee came up with his second miscue on Spearman's grounder. Williams skied to Tiano and Hayes fouled out to Zadany for the second out. Biot singled, scoring Spearman. Runners were on second and third now with two out and a single would mean the tying markers. Neff settled back. Evans came up and went back on strikes to end the battle.

Press Box Jottings

George McLean went to his left in the first to nab Williams' grounder for a nice play. . . . Spearman, the Yankee third sacker, hiked into the dark territory in the first to get McLean's foul. . . . The Yankee centerfielder, Biot, played a lot like Joe DiMaggio. His stance at the plate was almost identical. Neff got a lot of cheers from the crowd after whiffing Williams in the third with the bases packed. . . . The crowd moaned when Walker and Williams were "beaned." It was nice and warm in the press coup last night but some of the fans thought it was chilly in the stands. . . . The Recs may face the Homestead Grays next Friday at the stadium.

Stengel of Boston Nationals Reviews Max West's Life

West Hit Peak in Recent All Star Game; Casey Looks Back When Max Crashed Into Wall

The 1940 All Star classic is history now. But out of that game marched a new hero. It was Max West of the lowly Boston Bees who took the undivided spotlight and became a hero overnight.

Three of the runs making up the 4-0 count rode home when Max wafted his homer into the right-centerfield pavilion of historic Sportsman's Park. In the top of the second inning West made another heroic gesture, a leap against the rightfield wall trying to spear Luke Appling's long liner before it bumped the concrete a dozen feet above ground.

The unfortunate West who had previously amazed the fans with his offensive thrust, now had the fans on their feet again—this time in suspense, worrying about his limbs. Max crashed against the wall and toppled to the turf, out of action.

It turned out to be just a bruise and the big Boston Bee was in there swinging the next time the Nationals came up. But through Casey Stengel's mind, as he trod to the outfield, there probably paraded a panorama of West's courageous and colorful career.

High School to P. C. Loop

After schooling in Alhambra High School in California Max had hopes of going to the University of California. Before many days passed he was with Sacramento of the Pacific Coast League. Casey was then Brooklyn manager and Bob Quinn was the president.

Stengel urged the purchase of Max but before anything was settled, the club folded up. In 1936 West became a player with the Mission club. By spring of 1938 Stengel was Boston manager and Quinn the president.

At the National League meeting in February Casey said to Quinn, "Remember that kid out on the coast? That West, well, you've got him." Stengel and Johny Cooney, the veteran picket-line representative bore down and helped West to progress.

Goes to the Top

West's 1939 season saw him go to the top for he hit at least one homer in every park in the National League—two of them in St. Louis on the same afternoon. Max was an All Star in the Tampa victory of the National League. When the eight senior circuit managers chose him as a Boston representative for the July classic, Manager McKechnie nominated him to start.

Then the heroic homer. Now there he lies, out there on the grass! These high-lights paraded in Stengel's fancy as he marched to the spot where West lay on the ground. But the story had a happy ending. Soon West stood up and the thousands cheered him as loudly as when he hit the homer.

By Saturday of All Star game week he was swinging as lustily as ever. In the fifth inning in Chicago he came to bat with two on base—Bees this time instead of All Star teammates and the score 0 to 0. It was a typical West situation and he solved it typically, a sizzling drive to the outfield to drive them both across the plate.

It had the same effect as his All-Star game round-tripper. The opposing Cubs never tied that pair of tallies. The game ended 5 to 0, favor of the Hub team. The "Big Bee's" fame didn't end at its All Star game apex. The "Big Bee" marches on.

Oakland, Calif.—Chick Delaney, 121, San Leandro, Calif., knocked out Rio Rico, 119, Mexico City, (6).

Memorial Mass On Saturday for 'Bucky' Ashdown

Former City Baseball Loop Star Dead One Year on August 3; Had Many Friends

At St. Joseph's Church Saturday a Mass for the repose of the soul of William Francis ("Bucky") Ashdown, a former city league baseball player, will be held. The young athlete died August 3, 1939 after an automobile accident in Lake Katrine.

His former fellow-workers at the Smith avenue Bull Market are planning to hold the special Mass in his memory. They have also made special arrangements to procure floral decorations for the grave.

Because of his sportsmanship in both athletics and social matters, "Bucky" had many close friends.

The name of Satchel Paige is a household word among the Negro fans of the country. His pitching deeds have been the principal subject of conversation in their gatherings for many years and strong have been the arguments that he is better than any hurler who performed in the American and National leagues. White players who have batted against Paige are inclined to believe there is some basis for the belief.

Indians and Tigers Win To Remain in Tie for First; Giants Trim Reds

Tribe Beats Boston, 12-11; Bengals Eke Out Win Over the Yankees

(By The Associated Press)

The Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers still are deadlocked for the American League lead today, proving that miracles do happen.

They won two of the strangest struggles yesterday that ever went into the records in their desperate efforts to elbow each other off the top rung.

The Indians squeezed past the Boston Red Sox 12-11 in one of the nightmares. The Tribe was trailing 7-0 when it came to bat in the fourth and even after Ken Keltner hit a home run with the bases loaded Cleveland continued to lag behind until the eighth inning.

Finally Rookie Russ Peters delivered a pinch single with the sacks filled to score the Indians' tying and winning runs.

Detroit had to come from behind four times to beat the New York Yankees 7-6 in 11 innings. The situation didn't get critical until the eighth inning when the Tigers came to bat trailing 4-2. Pinky Higgins tripled with the bases loaded to put the Tigers in front, but George Selkirk clouted a pinch home run with one on in New York's half of the ninth.

Detroit, undaunted, tied up the score with three singles and finally, in the eleventh with Lefty Gomez doing a relief chore for the champs, scored the winning run on two walks and Hank Greenberg's single.

These games, as a matter of fact, sounded the keynote for all the major league activity on Wednesday.

Nothing could have been whackier than the doubleheader the St. Louis Cardinals swept from the pitiful Boston Bees, 3-1 and 17-8. The first game went 11 innings with Clyde Shoun and Dick Errikson wrapped in a pitching duel. Then Boston blew up and let in two runs. The cards collected 22 hits in the batting practice that passed for the second game. Johnny Mize hit a homer in each contest to make his total 30 for the year.

DiMaggio Held Hitless

Boston's losing streak was extended to nine games. And, mentioning streaks, Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees went hitless for the first time in 24 encounters in that sideshow at Detroit.

The New York Giants put on one of the season's most dramatic finishes to beat the Cincinnati Reds in a night game that attracted 30,334 fans to the Polo Grounds. Bucky Walters was on the threshhold of his 16th victory when Burgess Whitehead and Hank Danning each hit homers with a man on base in the ninth inning to beat him 5-4.

Walters had two out and two strikes on every one of the next four batters, but he walked two and gave homers to the two others.

The Chicago Cubs were whipped 7-3 by the Phillies and lost the services of Augie Galan probably for the remainder of the race because of a broken knee suffered when he crashed into a wall while chasing a foul. Manager Gabby Hartnett was hit on the head by a bat, but not seriously hurt. The big blast in the Phillies' triumph was a three-run homer by John Rizzo.

The Philadelphia Athletics edged out the Chicago White Sox 4-3 in a night game with Bill Beckman pitching four-hit ball and Wally Moses helping out with a two-run homer. This victory kept the Sox away from the first division and boosted the A's out of the cellar as St. Louis dropped a 13-5 decision to the Washington Senators.

The Senators aren't much as home run hitters, but they got two yesterday. Pitcher Ken Chase, who kept 11 hits well spaced, hit one with a mate abroad and Buddy Lewis pounded out another with one on.

Riggs Builds Feud By Loafing, Then Changing His Style

Tried It Against Opponent Last Week; Now Both Are Scheduled to Meet in Return Match

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 1 (AP)—Bobby Riggs, who likes to make his tennis matches look difficult and often annoys the gallery and his opponents while he's doing it, seems to be building up a court feud or two.

It seems that when Bobby falls behind, as he often does by loafing through the first set or two, he likes to change his playing equipment. He tried that trick against Henry Prusoff at Sea Bright, N. J., last week and made Hank so mad he asked for another crack at the national champion.

After losing the first set and trailing by three games in the second, Bobby halted the match, changed leisurely from sneakers to spiked shoes, then proceeded to beat Prusoff. The Seattle player decided then he'd like another chance at Riggs and asked to be put into Bobby's half of the draw in the current Meadow Club tournament.

They'll meet today in the quarter finals but Riggs got there only by means of a comeback that made all his previous ones look like practice. Bobby beat Eddie Alloo of Berkley, Calif., 6-4, 4-6, 7-5, after he missed elimination by a shot that was only an inch wide.

Others who entered the quarter final round were Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., George Toley of Los Angeles, Elwood Cooke of Portland, Ore., Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., Frank Guernsey of Orlando, Fla., and Don McNeill of Oklahoma City.

In the Maidstone Club's women's tournament at East Hampton, only two quarter-final singles matches were played yesterday. Sarah Palfrey of Reno, whipped Helen Germaine of New York, 6-2, 6-0, and Pauline Betz of San Francisco defeated Pat Canning of Alameda, Calif., 6-2, 6-2.

Groundwork for Good Golf

3. Find Your Own Swing Pattern

Every golfer should have a positive pattern. The golfer with championship aspirations should aim at the ideal swing which requires time, patience and practice. The average top-flight golfer should try for a slightly modified version of the ideal swing, with most golfers striving for a still further modified swing pattern. Fundamentals are almost standard but every case is individual, thus the need for personal professional supervision in aiding you to decide upon a definite swing plan and to see that you consistently adhere to it. Every swing and every golfer is an individual unit and must be dealt with separately. The catch-as-catch-can method of unrelated approach is bad. Begin each season with a definite swing pattern and make certain there is a clear understanding as to this objective as well as the outline of building toward it. Check occasionally to see that you are on the right track as practicing incorrectly is usually worse than no practice. With a clear conception of the fundamentals, a good game can be developed with a moderate amount of practice and play. Most golfers make what I consider a great mistake in contacting an instructor only when they are in unusual distress. This often results in emergency sort of treatment. It would be much better to consult with a professional and lay plans that would prevent emergency situations. Engage the golfing doctor to keep you well.

Swearing Means a Slapped Wrist On This Championship Ball Club

SHORTSTOP JESSIE LESLIE PITCHER WILMA TURNER CATCHER RUBY JOHNSON

These two sluggers and Wilma's pitching make Alameda tough to beat in any league.

By SAM JACKSON
AP Feature Service Writer

Alameda, Calif.—This challenges the fabulous record of those 1869 Cincinnati Red Stockings—a ball team in this town has won 96 straight games and is confidently forging ahead toward the 100 mark.

It's a girls' team, thought—softball, of course. As the record indicates, these girls claim national and international championships in their line. Lacking any commercial angel this season, they just go under the name "Alameda." County Supervisor Harry Bartell, father of Detroit shortstop Dick Bartell, scurries around and raises the money to keep them going.

Guiding genius of the club is a city fireman named O. W. Fisher, who seems to combine the abilities of manager, coach and talent scout in remarkable degree. He was once a jockey, and has never played much baseball himself.

Two National Titles

The first year Fisher got his gang together was 1938, and they went to Chicago to capture the national tournament. Last year they took it again, though two 1-to-0 games gave them a fright.

Barring some upset in regional eliminations, they will be on hand when the international softball tournament opens at Detroit Sept. 7 to seek their third title.

Some of the things Fisher runs up against are different from problems of the manager of male teams. The star pitcher who hurled the team to two championships got married and quit. Another star has just become a mother. When the going is tough, some of his players break down and cry. And so on.

The pitcher's box has been effectively filled this season by Wilma Turna, a 16-year-old high school girl of Bakersfield, Calif. She makes a round trip of nearly 600 miles to play in each game.

Pitching Star

"Willie" was heroine of last year's tournament when her double broke up a 12-inning tie with Louisville, and now she has lived up to her reputation by pitching 22 straight games and winning them all. She is women's bowling champion in her home town—a point for those who say bowling is good practice for softball pitching.

The Alamedas don't go in for sex appeal on the diamond by wearing the conventional shorts. They're ball players, and their sateen uniforms are cut just like those of professionals.

They're nice girls and have a rule against swearing even in the hottest moments of conflict. An offender must hold out her left arm and let each teammate take a whack at it.

Player's Condition Is Reported Fair After Head Injury

Walker of Black Yankees Who Was Hit by Ball Last Night by Charlie Neff Is in Hospital

The condition of Jesse Walker, baseball player with the New York Black Yankees, who was felled by a pitched ball thrown by Charlie Neff at municipal stadium last night, was reported as fair at the Benedictine Hospital. He was resting comfortably this morning.

Walker was cracked high on the left side of his head by one of Neff's fast tosses in the third inning of last night's game between the Black Yankees and the Kingston Recreations. He was rushed to the Benedictine Hospital. Today an X-ray was to be taken. Dr. William S. Bush is the attending physician.

Last year Neff met with a similar misfortune when he "beaned" a member of the Puerto Rican Stars. The player was in a local hospital several days suffering from a concussion of the brain.

In last night's game Walker was the first man to face Neff in the third inning. Unable to duck away from the oncoming pitch the player was struck with terrific impact, the ball bounding away as the injured athlete fell to the ground. Walker was carried to the dressing room and given first aid treatment by Dr. Francis E. O'Connor, who was one of the spectators. Connor's ambulance was summoned to dispatch Walker to the hospital.

Again in the seventh inning another near-serious mishap occurred when Roy Williams, the Yankee pitcher, was felled by another of Neff's speedy pitches. Williams fell to the ground in pain. After a brief rest he remained in the game. A few minutes later, however, he was taken out after falling to his knees on second base.

Late Wednesday evening the Yankees departed for New York city leaving the injured Jesse Walker in the local hospital for observation.

Rubber erasers are not too lowly for attention by the Federal Trade Commission. The Commission has expressed an opinion that the makers of erasers are unreasonably baffling competition, as well as lessening, eliminating, restraining, hampering, and suppressing it. It will soon be time for the makers to express their opinion.

City Softball League Results

Eichlers got off to a good start at Loughran Park last night by trimming the Y. M. C. A. softball team by 12 to 5. Norton and Bruce were the opposing hurlers.

In the first frame Joe Koslowski hit his 13th homer of the season with a man on to start the Eichlers going. Three more hits and a walk helped to produce the four runs in the initial stanza.

Then in the fifth three more markers were scored making it 9-0 until the "Y" softies came up and pushed in four runs. In the seventh Maurer, centerfielder for Eichlers, poked out a homer with two on. Y. M. C. A. scored the final run in the last of the seventh.

Big List Is Due For Rich Futurity At Belmont Track

51st Running Scheduled for September 28; Field Expected to Gross $80,000

The Futurity, richest two-year-old race in America scheduled for decision at Belmont Park, Saturday, September 28, has a current list of 142 candidates. The race, which is expected to gross approximately $80,000 has every good juvenile prospect in the country pointing for it.

The 1940 version of the Futurity, the 51st running, originally closed for nominations in January 1938 with 1,108 named. Since that time and with the original subscription fees the accumulated value has reached a figure of $48,400 which, plus the $25,000 added by the racing association and starting fees should eventually achieve the $80,000 mark.

This year, as usual, the brilliant meeting now in progress at Saratoga wil lbring forth the principal developments in the two-year-old division and not until the historic Hopeful is run late in the month will it be possible to have a true line on the principal contenders for first honors in the Futurity at Belmont.

Sixty-five owners are represented in the list of eligibles and this large number of individual interests gives assurance of an unusualy large starting field on September 28.

Clintons Leading Federation Loop, Presbys Second

Playoff Among the First Four Teams to Start Next Monday at Armory Field

Clinton Avenue leads the Federation League at the close of the season with Presbyterians second, Fair Street third and Congregational in fourth place. The season closed last evening and the playoff among the first four teams will open next Monday evening at Armory, No. 1, diamond when Clinton Avenue and Fair Street will open the series. Tuesday Presbyterians and Congregational will meet for the second game of the series at the same diamond.

Wednesday evening Clinton Avenue and Fair Street will meet for their second game and Thursday the second game will be played between the Presbys and Congregational.

Two out of three games will be required to designate the team for the final play-off which will be played between the two winning teams of the semi-final series which starts Monday, August 5. The winner of the finals will receive the trophy.

Last evening Port Ewen was defeated 1 to 6 by Congregationals in the final game of the season.

Two-Year-Olds Plentiful This Year at Saratoga

More Than 20 Are Listed for Juvenile Honors; Every Stable Will Be Represented

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 1 (AP)—You could count the outstanding two-year-olds on the fingers of one hand this time last year but today there are more than enough to go around.

Where a year ago there were only Bimelech and one or two others, almost every big stable now has at least one young racehorse it thinks can win Saratoga's big prize—the juvenile championship. Even the smaller fry report a record crop of promising possibilities.

Most of the 20 or so youngsters figuring prominently in championship speculation will get together within the next few days, some in Saturday's featured United States Hotel Stakes, the others in Tuesday's Saratoga Sales Stakes.

Highly regarded are the Millsdale Stable's High Breeze (despite his Flash Stakes defeat opening day), Crispin Oglebay's Level Best, Alfred Vanderbilt's New World, and Blensign, which, unfortunately, has no Spa stakes engagement.

To them have been added George D. Widener's Overdrawn, a smart winner of the Flash in which he upset the previously-unbeaten High Breeze; Victor Emmanuel's Omission, which was bumped out of the Flash at the very start, and the Greentree Stable's Monday Lunch, which graduated from maiden ranks in Monday's two-year-old Cavalry Charge.

Jumbled Scorebooks

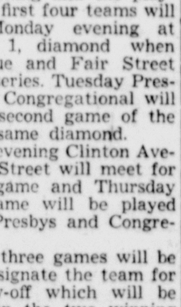

In one of the freak contests of the year, the Chicago White Sox defeated the Athletics, July 20, by a score of 19 to 7. The oddity of the game was that, despite the fact that Chicago scored 19 runs, they scored in only three innings, getting eight in the first, seven in the fifth and closing with four in the ninth. The White Sox matched their 19 runs with as many hits, with Mike Kresvich leading with four, including a homer and a double, Jules Solters with a pair of doubles and a single, drove in five runs. Frankie Hayes, Athletic catcher, remained in the thick of the loop's batting race with three singles and a triple, while Bob Johnson clouted his 18th homer. George Caster, former Athletic pitching ace, was tagged for his 14th defeat against only three victories.

Freeman to Play

Jimmy Little's Freeman softball team will meet the Bruins at Forsyth Park tonight at 6:15 o'clock. Both clubs have been pointing for this game. The last time out the Freeman team won a decisive victory and apparently the club has shaken off its losing streak of a few weeks back. Netter and Derrenbacher will make up the battery for the Freeman team with the following men completing the roster: "Knute" Beichert, Uhl, Hank Dittus, Mellert, Walt Kirchofer, Craig Plough, Jim Little, and Post. Nick Huber, Nick Bruck, Charlie Diers, Don Hyatt, Ellsworth Haines will also see action.

Sideline Chatter

The Kansas City keystone combination, Rizzuto and Priddy, may be broken up after the season. Baseball rumor says Priddy may play second base for the Yankees, with Joe Gordon replacing Frank Crosetti at shortstop. The St. Louis Browns may get Rizzuto and cash if they'll let the Yankees have First Baseman George McQuinn.

Ernie Lombardi

Frank Kovacs, lanky California youngster, has perhaps the fastest tennis backhand in the country.

Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati catcher, holds his baseball bat with a golfer's interlocking grip.

Adolf Keifer, Chicago backstrike swimmer, made a habit of breaking records in 1935 and hasn't broken the habit since. The 1936 Olympic games established him as the world's best and Keifer himself doesn't know how many times he has cracked records since that year.

Tuck Stainback, outfielder formerly with the Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers, is having a fine season with Montreal of the International League and reportedly headed back to the majors.

Johnny Butler

Johnny (Gone With The Wind) Butler, Tennessee's spectacular football halfback, has put on 15 pounds since last season . . . and expects to be as speedy and elusive as ever next fall.

Butterfingers are costing Ken Sears, son of the major league umpire, a chance with the New York Yanakees. Sears is Norfolk, Va., catcher. He hits and throws well but can't hang onto the apple.

were damaged by the lashing fall of hail.

Other growers of the area, Mr. Hurd said, also told him of serious losses by both wind and hail, but in a number of the orchards the damage was mostly by wind. Losses estimated in the Clintondale region, he said, were from five to ten per cent greater than during the hurricane of two years ago.

Younger trees in the various orchards swept by the storm were hardest hit by the wind, and in many instances large percentages of maturing crops were blown off the limbs.

Mr. Hurd said that the region was hit by two big showers Tuesday and both had hail and high winds. The one in particular, he described as a twister and this was perhaps the one which spent its fury across the river in Poughkeepsie.

Hail Not General

Some farms which were hit by the heavy rain were not touched by the hail, Mr. Hurd reported, and many sections heavily hit by the hailstorm experienced little or no damage by the wind. According to what he had heard today, he said, the region nearest New Paltz was not hit heavily by hail.

C. G. Small of the Farm Bureau office said this morning that the pear crops would probably be the only other fruit experiencing damage similar to that of the apple crops. He said that a trip yesterday over the region swept by the storm seemed to indicate that the damage was more scattered than concentrated and not as widespread over the entire fruit-growing region as in the storm of two years ago.

Damage in the Clintondale region was not as heavy two years ago, Mr. Hurd said, because most of the growers had picked a large percentage of their crops when that storm swept over the entire northeastern section of the country.

Mr. Hurd said also that he had learned of two recent storms accompanied by hail in the region west of Wallkill, which had caused considerable damage to apple crops there.

In the opinion of Mr. Hurd the damage by hail and wind "covered a larger area," in the lower section of the county than that of the storm of two years ago, although the storm was more of a hit-and-miss type.

House Is Struck

At Highland it was reported today that the house of Mrs. Maud Upright was struck by lightning which tore a hole through the roof of the structure.

Discovery of a fire which followed was made by a workman at the nearby Nardone plant, who saw smoke coming from the roof. A fire alarm was impossible since the electric line had been broken by the storm but firemen were finally summoned and checked a smouldering fire in the attic.

Firemen were forced to break their way into the building since Mrs. Upright is on her way home from a trip to Texas and Mexico.

Truck Upsets

It was reported also today that a truck upset near Clintondale striking a pole and throwing an electric line out of service.

Philip T. Schantz of Highland also reported two fields of corn flattened by the rain, hail and wind, and other corn crops of the region were reported damaged.

At Milton today it was reported that the storm seemed to strike a region just north of the village with its full fury, causing considerable damage to crops there mainly by wind.

A house occupied by D. M. Warren was reported struck by lightning but no one was at home there today and the report was unverified.

Several trees were reported blown down in the vicinity of the village, but none of these were reported as a serious traffic hazard. It was reported at the farm of J. Westerveldt Clarke that one section of an orchard was hit heavily by the windstorm, but the loss there was not widespread.

It was reported that some loss of crops due to the heavy wind was experienced at the farm of Walter R. Clark and a few others in that vicinity. No damage by hail was reported at Milton.

Denver Men Can't Wait For Army Training

Defense Brigade Builds Wooden Guns, Drills On Lunch Hours

By VIRGIL LEWIS

AP Feature Service

Denver—Two hundred Denver men were so anxious to obtain military training that they couldn't wait for the regular army to provide it.

They "conscripted" themselves into the 411th infantry, bought their own makeshift uniforms, and carved their guns out of wood.

At their head are regular army reserve officers, some of them veterans of the first World War.

As the word gets around, more citizens are joining up — many from the factories and offices, business houses, the professions and schools. But they are not recognized by the army and get no official training credit.

Companies Streamlined

Col. Philip S. Van Cise, a Denver attorney and an officer overseas during the first World War, is commander. He says the training school gives reserve officers experience in handling men, aside from providing a basic military course for citizens interested in national defense.

The 411th's officers have organized the citizen-soldiers into a rifle company and a heavy weapons company, both streamlined. The citizens pay for cotton khaki trousers, shirts and overeas caps.

Some of the men drill during lunch hour in vacant lots near offices or factories. Others report two nights a week. Every other Sunday the entire regiment goes into the foothils for field exercises.

The Continental Divide in the mountains west of Denver has been designated a boundary line between two imaginary nations, the Reds and the Blues. Recently, without declaring war, the Reds started marching on Denver, capital of the Blues.

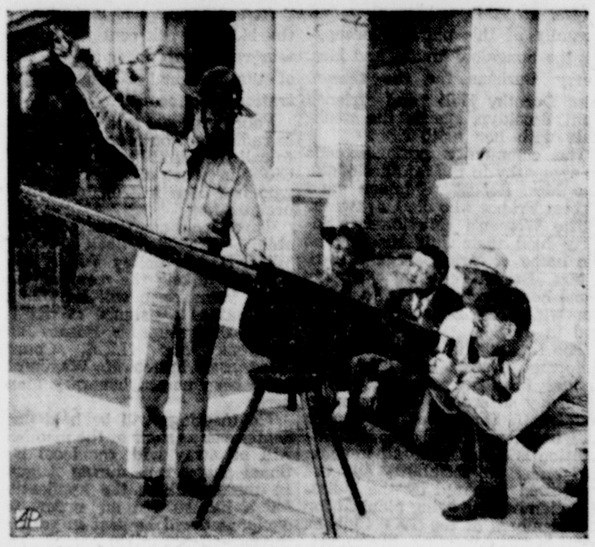

The Blue army of the 411th was given a sector to defend in the foothills near Morrison, 20 miles west of Denver. The amateur soldiers got a lot of sunshine, dust and military experience as they lugged their wooden machine guns and mortars about the hills. They worried about getting ammunition, food and water to the crews manning the front line guns.

From 16 to 50

The military students include World War veterans as old as 50 and high school lads of 16.

"They're getting the same kind of training they would be given if they quit their jobs and went to camp," says Colonel Van Cise.

"We've started at the bottom and are giving them a systematic education in fundamentals of the military game. If this country ever needs them they'll be a lot better material than men without training."

Volunteers of the 411th Infantry train their home made wooden anti-aircraft gun on an imaginary bomber, under direction of Maj. Harold R. Booth.

List of Prominent Frenchmen Lose Rights, Property

Berlin, Aug. 1 (AP)—A long list of prominent Frenchmen have been ordered deprived of their citizenship and their properties confiscated, the German wireless announced today.

The list, the first since the Petain regime decreed action against those who left France "without valid reasons" between May 10 and June 30, included two members of the internationally known Rothschild banking family. It was broadcast by the government station at Vichy and picked up here.

The two Rothschilds were Baron Edouard, head of the French branch of the family's far-flung banking operations, and Baron Maurice, a member of the French Senate.

(Baron Maurice de Rothschild arrived in Montreal this week with a cousin, Baron Robert de Rothschild, the latter's wife and daughter, after having taken temporary refuge in Britain. Baron Edouard, his baroness and their daughter, arrived in New York July 10 by clipper plane.

(Baron Maurice, described by fellow passengers as "nervous and shaken" by his experiences, declined to comment on the French government's action.)

Others on the list included some of France's leading industrialists, political leaders and journalists.

Among them were Deputies Harri Mayer of the international banking firm of Lazare Freres; and Edouard Jonas, widely known Paris antique dealer; Louis Rosengart, automobile manufacturer; M. Solenski, one of France's largest hat makers; Raoul Buchard, a leading industrialist; M. Huysman and M. Coen, directors of the Beaux Arts and National Library; M. Levitan, furniture and radio magnate; and Louis Louis-Dreyfus, banker and importer.

Journalsts included were J. Bois, publisher of Le Petit Parisien; Madame Genevieve Tabouis, foreign editor of L'Oeuvre; Pierre Lazareff and Joseph Kessel, of Paris-Soir; Henri De Kerillis and Andre Geraud.

(Geraud, who writes under the name "Pertinax," and Madame Tabouis, are in the United States.)

Charges Are Filed Against Almazan In Mexico City

Mexico City, Aug. 1 (AP) — The permanent congressional commission today filed with the federal attorney general charges that General Juan Andreu Almazan, aggressive independent presidential candidate, and his supporters were guilty of activities of "a subversive character."

The commission, which represents Congress, particularly attacked the statements of Gen. Almazan and his partisans that they would establish their own "legal" Congress and declare Gen. Almazan elected president if his "triumph" in the July 7 election should not be recognized by the government when it announces the outcome next month.

Gen. Almazan and the administration-backed candidate, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, each claimed victory.

The commission petitioned the attorney general to investigate the "violation of the secret vote," the "luxury of violence, culminating in fights and murders that marked election day," and Gen. Almazan's statement he would be the next president of Mexico regardless of how the vote was announced.

By-Pass Accident Tangles Traffic For Over 3 Hours

from the tractor and overturned directly across the by-pass closing it to traffic. The load of vinegar and juice was scattered over the highway. The tractor did not overturn and was able to proceed off the road after the accident under its own power although the "fifth wheel" which connects the trailer to the tractor was torn loose.

Sheriff Abram F. Molyneaux sent several men to the scene where photographs were taken of the accident by Deputy Sheriff Arthur Brown. Sergeant James J. Cunningham and Trooper Walter Keefe of Saugerties were also summoned to the scene to aid in the investigation.

According to the reports made the rear bumper and fender of the Hughes car was struck by the tractor-trailer as Pisaturo attempted to avoid the crash. Pisaturo then swung back to his right to avoid a head-on crash with the north-bound truck and his truck sideswiped the Whittaker truck but did little damage. It then began to sway and finally overturned.

Hughes was accompanied by his wife; his daughter, Marjorie; his son, Kenneth, and Mildred Soper of 8 Park avenue. None of the people were injured seriously although Mrs. Hughes complained of pain in her side but refused medical attention.

A wrecker from the Doc Smith Garage righted the heavy trailer from the roadway after considerable difficulty and a county truck was summoned to tow it off the road and restore traffic.

Whereabouts of Chemist Are Learned From Abroad

Bucharest, Aug. 1 (AP)—The disappearance of Albrecht Douglas of New York, German-American chemist missing for two weeks, was partly explained today by the United States legation, which announced he had been held by Rumanian secret police for nine days, then released, and might be again in custody.

The Rumanian high command said Douglas had been arrested on suspicion of espionage. Evidence proved insufficient and he was released July 27. It is probable he has been picked up again by another branch of the police, the high command said.

The legation is investigating to learn Douglas' whereabouts and other details.

Douglas, 43 years old, of 26 West 68th street, Nek York, was working on an artificial blood formula of importance in war time, his friends said.

With his wife, the former German Baroness Maltzahn, who had a Chilean passport, he disappeared July 18. The couple left money, clothing and personal papers at their boarding house.

To Protest Blockade

Tokyo, Aug. 1 (AP via Radio)—Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu in London will "certainly" protest sharply against Britain's new blockade of Europe, Domei, Japanese new agency, declared today. The agency said Japan would not accept the new measure by which Japan's trade with Spain, Portugal and other neutrals stands to suffer. Ambassador Shigemitsu has been instructed to seek clarification of the new order in council, described as "illegal," the agency said.

Fooled by Fake Bombs

Union City, N. J., Aug. 1 (AP)—Police of this area have been fooled three times in less than a month by fake bombs, but they're still not taking any chances. When a "suspicious looking" suitcase was discovered on the grounds of St. Michael's monastery yesterday, police soaked it in oil and water and finally blazed away at it with shotguns. Then they opened it and found—a quantity of religious pamphlets. A woman, they learned, had left the "bomb" at the monastery by mistake.

Another Camden Fire Breaks Out In Navy Tender

Camden, N. J., Aug. 1 (AP)—While firemen poked through the still smouldering ashes of a paint factory fire believed to have taken nine lives, flames broke out on the $12,000,000 navy seaplane tender Curtiss berthed on the Delaware river. The craft was launched in April.

Scaffolding inside one of the main stacks of the 9,000-ton tender blazed up last night but the fire was extinguished without major damage.

Officials of the New York Shipbuilding Company declared there was "no suspicion of sabotage" but that the Federal Bureau of Investigation would make a "routine" inquiry "as in all such cases."

Suavet Is Head of Arsenal at Brooklyn

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 1 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Henry E. Sauvet, 47, New York National Guard ordnance officer of the 27th division, was named today assistant adjutant general and officer in charge of the state arsenal at Brooklyn.

Suavet succeeds Col. William A. Taylor, 64, who retired yesterday because of age regulations.

Suavet, whose home is in New York city, entered the guard in 1912 and served in the regular army during the war with Mexico and overseas in the World War.

Buys It by 'Phone

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—J. K. Li, Chinese, needed an airplane ticket in a hurry. Phoning for a reservation, he was told to pay for the ticket at a Western Union office. So he dialed the telegraph company from a public phone and fed $11.95 in nickels, dimes and quarters into the coin box. The airline said it was all right, but expressed pleasure that Li was buying passage to Boston rather than Los Angeles.

Dr. Westrick Left Home Last Night, His Servants Say

Alleged German Business Agent Leaves No Word of His Whereabouts

Scarsdale, N. Y., Aug. 1 (AP)—Dr. Gerhardt Alois Westrick, a special business representative of the German government, last night suddenly left the estate where, the New York Herald Tribune disclosed today, he had been living with his family since May 6.

A maid at the house in an exclusive residential section said they didn't say where he had gone or when he would return.

Among persons who saw Dr. Westrick frequently in the four months since he arrived in this country is Capt. Torkild Rieber, chairman of the board of the Texas Company.

Capt. Rieber, at a press conference at his New York office, said that Dr. Westrick was his German attorney and that he intended to talk with him any time he chose.

Dr. Westrick, a German supreme court lawyer, is accredited in the state department's diplomatic list as commercial counselor to the German embassy.

Capt. Rieber described Dr. Westrick as a lawyer who has represented "some of the largest American companies" in Germany.

"Westrick, a very decent fellow, has done very little for us," he said.

He explained that he had directed a subordinate to help Dr. Westrick get a driver's license and had offered the use of a company car.

"I did that and considered it good business," he added.

"Since the war began, he continued, "the Texas Company has not, directly or indirectly, sold one dollar's worth of oil to Germany or Italy."

The Evening Dispatch in White Plains, N. Y., said Scarsdale police at the direct request of FBI officials had been keeping a record of the license numbers of all automobiles which had stopped at Dr. Westrick's home.

Firemen Called For Slight Fires

Curtains in Hewitt Place Home Are Damaged

Wednesday evening the fire department was called to the home of Samuel Gally at 12 Hewitt place, where a curtain and window shade had caught fire. The fire was out when the firemen reached the house.

According to the fire department a seven-year-old boy while in a bedroom on the second floor had lighted a match intending to throw it out of the open window. Instead the lighted match struck the window curtains, setting them afire. A neighbor saw the blaze and running into the house tore down the burning curtain and shade and threw them out in the yard.

Earlier in the evening the fire department was called for a fire in the auto of Edward Schatzel caused by a short circuit. The fire was extinguished before the firemen arrived.

Harsh punishments, given equally for big and little misdeeds and that make no allowance for human errors, do not help children to learn good behavior, child specialists say.

Amateur Radio Club Is Formed; Named for Edson

At a meeting held last night at the N.Y.A. work center, an amateur radio club under the auspices of the National Youth Administration, was formed.

Fourteen local youth interested in radio were on hand and decided to call their unit "the Edson Radio Club" in honor of Harry L. Edson who has been instrumental in its organization.

Three local amateurs, Len Edelstein W2JZT, Jack Najork W2HNH and LeRoy Fuller W21-TK, are among the members and these young men will be able to give valued assistance to the tyros in the group. Mr. Edson, John Schwenk and N.Y.A. County Supervisor Milton H. Wagenfohr have been named honorary members.

No meetings will be held until September as some of the members will be away with the local National Guard unit during August. In the meantime the application for a license and an order for equipment will be sent in so that things will get off to a good start when the club meets next month.
